CLASH ON 'BAR AND BOTTLE'

The temperance advocates and representatives of the liquor interests of the Commonwealth clashed before the Legislative Committee on Legal Affairs today at a hearing on a bill for the repeal of the so-called Bar and Bottle Act. This law, passed by the Legislature of 1910, prohibits the sale of liquor over the bar and by the bottle in the same establishment. The liquor dealers of the State seek to have it repealed.

Temperance supporters, headed by representatives of the Anti-Saloon League, want the law retained. The brief argument to day of those who want the bill repealed, was that it had failed to accomplish the object for which it was passed, namely, the diminishing of drunkenness. Instead, liquor dealers contend that it has increased drunkenness and through it liquor is now taken in quantities into many homes to debauch the inmates.

Woods and Davis Deny It.

Robert A. Woods of the South End House and Arthur J. Davis, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, both of whom spoke against the repeal of the bill, denied this.

It was the first hearing on a liquor bill since the discharge of the Liquor Law Committee, following the charge made by temperance people that the committee had been discourteous to them, when they appeared before it, in opposition to laws to extend the sale of liquor.

Room 249 at the State House, where the hearing was held, was crowded to the doors by men, women and a number of girls.

High School Girls.

Among the girls were twenty members of the Civics Class of the New Bedford High School, who were on a visit to the State House and were interested auditors during the hearing. Among the others present were members of the Anti-Saloon League and other temperance organizations as well as a number of widely known men in the liquor business. Those who opposed the repeal of the act were of one mind that the law has had a good effect.

If closing his argument Secretary Davis of the Anti-Saloon League complimented the committee and thanked the members for the courtesy shown those who spoke.

All liquor bills now before the Legislature are to come before the Committee on Legal Affairs.

B. & M. STOCK SELLS AT 67, A SLIGHT GAIN

Boston & Maine opened on the local exchange at 65½ today. It was unchanged in quotation from the final figure of yesterday's market. At noon the price rose to 68, a gain of two points and a half.

New York, New Haven & Hartford began unchanged at 115, and while Boston & Maine was gaining more than a point in trading the New Haven issue sagged half a point to 114½.

New Haven opened weak in New York, where it sold at the start at 113⅝, or 1⅜ lower than the closing price yesterday, 115¼.

The New York opening quotation was more than eleven points below the price prevailing a week ago and represented a decline of 29 from what it was quoted at a year ago.

Rotten Eggs NOT Good for Food, Says Chemistry Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 18.—In answer to the statement of Professor Sedgwick, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, that rotten eggs are fit for food, officials of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture could do nothing more than laugh today.

"We refuse to advise the American public to use rotten eggs as breakfast food," said Chief Smith, "and will be contented to allow Professor Sedgwick to eat all the viable supply himself. I think he is welcome to all of them."

Contrary to Professor Sedgwick's views, a rotten egg does contain harmful substances, according to Mr. Smith, which will have a deleterious effect on the human system if the practice of eating defunct eggs is continued for any length of time, not considering the pain of eating them.

PATIENTS FLEE FIRE AT STATE SANATARIUM

RUTLAND, March 18.—Fire starting in the boiler house of Rutland Sanatorium for Consumptives at 3 a. m. today did $6,000 damage and drove many of the patients into the cold air. The clothing of several of these was wet by hose streams and then froze in the bitter cold. Stronger patients helped the firemen.

The fire burned three hours before firemen and patients got it under thorough control.

The excitement through the entire institution—which is built in the "group" system—was tremendous.

In the infirmary, where the weaker patients are cared for, there was keen fear lest these be forced out into the cold.

Damage to the boiler room and shutting down the engines caused the institution lights and heat to go out of commission.

After the fire was under control there was a great deal of discomfort from lack of steam and from the necessity of using candles until daylight.

Hypnotizes Wife That Dentistry May Be Painless

NORTH ADAMS, March 18.—After her husband had put her in a hypnotic state today, Mrs. Guy H. Hemenway had a live nerve taken from her tooth in four sections. The operation was painless and was performed by Dr. N. B. Shay.

Four years ago, when the couple were living at Pittsfield, Mrs. Hemenway was hypnotized by her husband and gave birth to a baby boy without the slightest pain.

A number of physicians attended both experiments. They stated that the facts as given out are absolutely true.

During the painless tooth pulling operation today Mrs. Hemenway was as cold as in death. Mrs. Hemenway was in a hypnotic state for twenty minutes. When she came out of the trance Mrs. Hemenway said she "felt fine."

Shaw, Salem Deaf Mute, Wins Fight for Son's Custody

The long fight which William E. Shaw, a deaf mute of Salem, has made for the custody of his ten-year-old son, William E. Shaw, Jr., ended today, when in the Probate Court at Salem Judge Harmon decided the father should have the custody of his boy.

Although much testimony was taken, not a sound was to be heard in the court room while witnesses were testifying, for all the principals in the case are deaf mutes. Their testimony was given in the sign language and spectators and court officials alike craned their necks as the interpreter put questions and received answers.

J. C. Church, also a deaf mute and father of Shaw's first wife, was appointed guardian of the boy in 1907. Shaw married again several years ago and then began legal action to obtain custody of the child.

TRAIL WOMEN IN EATON MYSTERY

How great the importance attached by the police to every movement of every member of Admiral Eaton's family was shown this afternoon when Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes of Lonsdale street, Dorchester (June Ainsworth), was shadowed by order of Plymouth county officials.

She is the elder step-daughter of Rear-Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, whose death at his home in Assinippi village, West Norwell, is subject of a rigid police investigation.

Mrs. Keyes was seen buying a ticket for Boston at Hingham depot this noon by State Officer John Scott of Braintree and Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon of Rockland. When she boarded the 12:42 train for Boston she was followed, by order of Scott.

Every member of the Eaton family has been made a subject of police espionage. Every intimate of the Eatons is made a subject of police questioning.

STRANGE WOMAN IN BROWN IS WITNESS.

A "mysterious woman" in brown was the feature at the inquest proceedings, which were resumed before Special Justice Edward B. Pratt at the Hingham section of Second Plymouth District Court today. This woman was met at the court by Deputy Condon and was escorted quickly to the judge's private office. She refused to tell her name, but admitted she was a witness.

Ernest Sparrell, the Norwell undertaker was the first inquest witness. He described the body of Admiral Eaton and told how Dr. Joseph Frame of Rockland, the Eaton family physician, telephoned him to suspend embalming operations.

Deputy Sheriff George W. Conant of South Weymouth testified to Mrs. Eaton and June Ainsworth, as she was then living temporarily in Weymouth when the Eatons separated after the death of their adopted baby three years ago.

Mrs. John Barnes, former housekeeper for the Eatons, and Earle Forsman, clerk at the Assinippi corner grocery, where Admiral Eaton spun naval yarns, were other witnesses.

The following of Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes was the sensation of the inquest day at Hingham, though it was independent of the inquest itself.

The session before Judge Pratt in the District Courtroom had adjourned at 12:30. Just then a trolley from Rockland rolled into Hingham square. In it was Mrs. Keyes, reading a newspaper and smiling. She stepped from the car. She wore black and carried a small handbag, with her rolled up newspaper.

Didn't Seem to Mind Crowd.

She walked quickly across the square to the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad station. Reporters and photographers recognized and started for her. This attracted others until there were seventy-five people trailing behind the self-possessed, slender young woman.

Mrs. Keyes bought a ticket for Boston, then sat down and began to read, smiling occasionally to herself.

Meanwhile State Officer Scott and Deputy Sheriff Condon, emerging from the inquest, had noticed the crowd and started to the depot. They spied Mrs. Keyes, walked near her, where she could not fail to see them. The officers conversed a moment, then asked the ticket agent if Mrs. Keyes had bought a ticket and where for.

When they found she was bound for Boston, with a train due at 12:42, the officers made arrangements to have some one follow her.

It seems that, when Mrs. Keyes left the Eaton home at Assinippi today, she walked over to Mann's Corner, a mile and one-half, to get the Hingham trolley. Constable J. Frank Hammond, who was guarding the Eaton house, walked much of the way with her, until he practically saw her on the car. Then Hammond returned to the Eaton home to take up his post there.

As Mrs. Keyes was seen by Scott and Condon about as soon as she landed in Hingham, she was under observation nearly all the time. While State Officer Scott was arranging at Hingham depot to have Mrs. Keyes followed the latter kept on reading calmly. Incoming travelers, waiting for the 12:42, swelled the gathering throng of idle spectators until the waiting room was well filled. Mrs. Keyes went out on the platform just before the train came in.

A batteryy of photographers lined up ahead of her and she promptly turned her back. When the train pulled in she boarded it quickly.

Barker First on Hand.

The Eaton inquestwas resumed for the third day in the Hingham session of the Second Plymouth District Court in the Water Company's building on South street, Hingham, at 10 a. m. today.

District Attorney Albert F. Barker was

WILSON AND TILLMAN CLASH INDICATED.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Evidence of a clash between President Wilson and Senator Tillman of South Carolina appeared today when the Senator gave out the speech which he made before the Democratic caucus that decided against him for the chairmanship of the committee on appropriations. The man claims he made the campaign for the chairmanship because President Wilson wanted him to accept that post in the interests of Democratic economy and progressive principle.

SCULPTOR AMATEIS DIES SUDDENLY

REVERE PUZZLED; OLD TAX COLLECTOR WON'T COLLECT, NEW ONE CAN'T

A new situation in the Revere political muddle developed today when it became known that there are two tax collectors in office and that neither will collect taxes.

It is said that as a result residents of the town may be forced to pay interest on their taxes. In such case another interesting situation would exist.

Minot D. Fenno, a Republican, served for twelve years as tax collector. On March 3 Arthur Pendergast, Democrat, was elected. After election Fenno collected a few taxes, and then sat back and became resigned to fate. The auditors are now going over his books.

In the meantime, Pendergast has no warrant to collect taxes. It will be two months before Fenno's books are audited, and his warrant transferred. A warrant for the 1913 taxes will not be issued until September.

What Pendergast Says.

Pendergast said:

"I have no authority to collect taxes until a warrant is issued. I am prepared to collect as soon as I receive a warrant and have filed my bond which has been approved by the Board of Selectmen. In my opinion it is the duty of the old collector to collect taxes until the assessors have issued a new warrant.

"Former Collector Fenno refuses to receive taxes. Present Collector Pendergast has no authority to receive them.

"And the interest is piling up."

To add to the gayety, Former Chief of Police Fred S. Sackett says that "spotters" from Boston, in the employ of Acting Chief of Police Claire P. Cheney, were paid salaries out of last year's appropriation for the police department of Revere.

Accusation Starts Gossip.

This accusation, made at the town meeting in Revere Town Hall last night by Sackett himself, is causing unusual gossip today in political circles in that town.

Mr. Hackett, referring to the runabout he used during his administration, declared those who accused him of being extravagant in keeping the machine. This, he said, was his answer.

There would have been no shortage in the appropriation for police department work if the Board of Selectmen kept their hands off and allowed those appointed to run the department to do so.

A ripple of applause greeted this sally. The meeting was the largest in years and was attended by at least 1,400 persons. Several women were in the balcony.

Michael J. Shaw, moderator, wielded the gavel, and Albert J. Brown, town clerk, kept tabs on the movers of motions.

Benjamin Hanson led the forces in favor of retrenchment, and John D. Coughlan, chairman of the Finance Commission, argued for the adoption of the appropriations in the budget. Representatives of the Economy League opposed a number of Silas' amendments, claiming they did not represent any saving of money. As it was, the meeting chopped $10,709 from the budget.

Among the cuts were: Town solicitor, from $1,500 to $800; police department, from $4,000 to $1,000; fire department, from $5,000 to $3,500; fuel for public buildings, from $5,000 to $4,000; town incidental account, from $8,000 to $3,000; highway department, from $33,000 to $30,000; fire department incidental account, from $2,500 to $1,000.

Debate Police Salaries.

The shorter and uglier term was used during the debate between William Colcord, a member of the board of assessors, and Samuel A. Segee, chairman of the board. Colcord shouted:

"The man who says I neglected a public duty assigned to me lies."

Here Moderator Shaw came down with a bang of the gavel.

Quiet prevailed for several moments and then Colcord proceeded:

"You put your condemnation on the theory advanced by the majority of the board of assessors and you will do the town good and assist in stopping thievery."

Segee then got the floor. He took a position near the stage. He said:

"Monday is a good day to wash dirty linen." (Looking at Colcord. This was followed by jeers and hisses. Moderator Shaw banged the gavel on the table and, order being restored, cautioned against such tactics, remarking that no gentlemen would hiss.

Former Senator Alfred S. Hall spoke against an increase of pay for the members of the police force, declaring he hinted at police meddling with a member of the board of selectmen to change his votes on different propositions. He felt that the Revere police were different from those in large cities in that they cared for a "peaceful rural village."

"If the police would have politics alone we would give them an increase," he said —(Applause).

Clash on "Incidentals."

After criticising several persons, Segee caused a wave of laughter by mentioning that he was glad to see the way the people were drifting. So contagious became the laughter that the chairman had to pound for order.

Moses Mished, who sat well to the front, got recognition from the chair, had his say and sat down contented. Edward Wallace didn't like the idea of reports being printed in the back of books. Benjamin said such a procedure was a "flexible arrangement and covered a multitude of sins."

Then an argument arose over "incidentals" appearing at the end of an appropriation for the town account. Robert M. Copeland, who held a position near the outer door, was summoned to explain. He buffeted his way to the front and declared:

"Incidental accounts are those that are used by departments that have no appropriations."

Benjamin Sias, who assumed leadership for the economy element, put Copeland on the grill about an $8,000 item. A series of questions and answers from each other enlivened things. John D. Coughlan, chairman of the finance committee, took a hand. He accused Sias of making a hare brain motion.

Sias got the floor and answered Coughlan, declaring that he (Sias) knew something about "unidentified exaggerated ego and mental propensities." Sias said he was going to keep a dollar in the taxpayers' pocket until the American eagle screamed to get out.

Highway Appropriations.

Next came a discussion of the appropriation for the highway department. The budget called for $33,000. An amendment was offered to cut the amount to $30,000. This stirred John V. Fitzgerald, the new superintendent of streets, to action. He stepped forward and submitted a list of outstanding bills. He said there was a bill of $965 for broken stone. The amendment was carried.

Dominick Maggi, corpulent, rather heavy on his feet, strolled toward the stage. He declared: "Revere is being looked upon as a principality like Monaco." He was of opinion that those who were the crown in town politics and who had been defeated for re-election, whether the office was in State or town, should allow the dinden to be worn by the victors and not rob the latter by putting thorns in their paths.

Maggi wore a green crown in the lapel of his coat, and said that head crowns were plentiful in Revere. He did believe, though, that the policemen should be crowned with $100 a year. He appealed to those who earned their living "in the sweat of their face" to vote for the policeman, who suffers so much in the performance of his duty.

John H. Hayes said Maggi had a nice way of strolling the lanes. Robert Perlo, chairman of the Economic League, thought the same way and spoke against the increase. Then Jacob Mendosa recused Maggi as the man who at a recent town meeting tried to push through a land scheme. Mendosa called attention to the nasty exit from the hall when he (Mendosa) got the floor. Mendosa charged Maggi with acting like a jumping-jack to pull strings for the members of the police department.

Teachers Wait for Pay.

Maggi, who was in the corridor, evidently heard Mendosa. The latter had all stops pulled out and was giving a full organ recital. Then the skyrockets exploded. Maggi, who had returned, asked for the floor. He did twenty others. The latter asked that the main question be put. Maggi had the loudest voice. He decided for Segee as "a homeie citizen." The latter had his reputation had been assailed. Moderator Shaw said he would allow Maggi to talk.

Maggi was cut short by jeers from the rear of the hall. Mendosa, white with rage, hurled several verbal cobblestones at Maggi, which caused another commotion. Mendosa said Maggi was a parasite because the town voted down his land scheme.

Mendosa appeared to be losing his temper. Several friends urged him to sit down. He took a seat in the second row. Maggi approached and whispered something in Mendosa's ear. Somebody said it was a challenge.

Then No. 16 on the budget, which called for an appropriation for the school department, was reached. The school teachers have been without pay for several weeks, and action will not be taken on their appropriation until a week from next Monday.

1600 WOMEN QUIT GARMENT SHOPS TODAY

Sixteen hundred women and girls, members of the Ladies' Garment Makers' Union, went on strike today, alleging violation of the agreement entered into between their union and the Ladies' Garment Manufacturers' Association in the settlement of the previous strike last Saturday. The strikers quit today in fifteen of the sixty shops whose proprietors are members of the manufacturers' association because, they allege, the proprietors refused to discharge non-union employes and strike-breakers employed during the previous strike.

The strikers claim that the bosses had entered into an agreement to do this when the strike was settled. Local officers of the union declared today that unless the bosses discharged these non-union workers by tonight another general strike would be called.

The proprietors of the shops where the employes struck today say that they made no agreement to discharge non-union help.

A joint committee composed of members of the union and the manufacturers' association was delegated today to visit the proprietors of the shops where the workers have struck in an effort to adjust all differences.

It is said the strike today resulted from a misunderstanding by both sides as to the terms of the agreement of the settlement of the last strike. About 16,000 of the four thousand women and girls were at work today in shops were no non-union help or strike-breakers have been employed.

Joseph Mantell, twenty-eight, of No. 685 Seventh street, South Boston, said to be a striker of the Ladies' Garment Makers' Union, was arrested today charged with assault and battery on Louis Vallasarro, who is said to be a strikebreaker. The alleged assault occured near No. 340 Washington street.

Morgan Has Auto Ride; Centres Time on New Art Works

ROME, March 18.—Despite the illness which spoiled his Winter vacation, J. Pierpont Morgan will take back to New York with him a number of rare art works which have been picked up for him in Europe and Egypt.

Mr. Morgan and his son-in-law, Herbert L. Satterlee, again motored today, and Mr. Morgan seemed more vivacious than upon any occasion since his arrival here from Cairo.

Since Prof. Bastianelli, the eminent Italian specialist, has banished work and tobacco, from Mr. Morgan's daily life, he has centered all his active attention upon the adoration of his new art works.

Daily he spends hours examining rare ceramics, including Etruscan, Roman and Egyptian vases, gold works from the shop of Reyzenato Cellini and rare vellum editions of the fifteenth century, illuminated and printed by hand in the mediaeval monasteries. One of the chief prizes among his new Egyptian work is a sphinx vase several feet high.

With the noose around his neck and the end of the shirt knotted firmly to the bars of his cell door, he stood on a chair and jumped off. In doing so he kicked over a tin dipper. The noise brought Sergeant Alpben and Night Officer Monitton, who cut him down. In court today his case was continued until March 25.

Cleveland, the President's son, received the key and opened the front door, and Richard's sister, Esther, was the first to enter the room where her father first saw the light. Just seventy-six years ago, and to decorate it with flowers. Their mother, now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, was among the spectators.

The Cleveland memorial in the Presbyterian manse, which the Cleveland family occupied when the coming President's father was pastor of the Caldwell Presbyterian church. For its purchase the Memorial Association realized $25,000, of which $9,000 was contributed by residents of this town and the rest by a number of wealthy men, many of whom came here today for the opening. A movement is on foot to raise $25,000 more by popular subscription, to provide for its care. Until this money is obtained and a caretaker installed, the manse will continue to be occupied by the present pastor of the church.

The exercises late this afternoon included a short address by John H. Finley, president of the College of New York, and president of the Memorial Association; a speech of welcome by Mayor John Espy of Caldwell, and other addresses. The exercises took place on a platform in front of the house.

COPE LOVE SUIT GOES TO JURY; WIFE SAYS HE MIXED HUGS AND POKER

The alienation suit of Frederick W. Cope, who wants $25,000 damages from John Shaw, a retired furniture dealer, went to the jury at noon today. Mrs. Cope testified that her husband choked her, that he took her to a picnic and sat all afternoon playing poker with his arm around another woman's waist and that she had lost all her affection for him six weeks ago.

Cope admitted that he grabbed his wife by the arm. Witnesses testified that Cope was frequently intoxicated, but he denied this saying that no one had ever seen him that way. Shaw denied that he had been unduly friendly with Mrs. Cope.

Tells of Picnic Scenes.

The case is being heard by Judge White and a jury in the Civil Superior Court at East Cambridge. Mrs. Cope concluded her testimony this forenoon. She said she left her husband because he assaulted her and she became afraid of him. Speaking of her husband she said:

On one occasion he came home at 6 a. m. I expostulated with him. I mentioned his mother's name in some manner and he grabbed me by the throat and called me an "insignificant pup."

In 1911 we went to a picnic at Weymouth. A keg of beer was brought along and all the men were half drunk. There was a woman my husband took a fancy to and he put his arm around her and played poker all the afternoon. Later on they took a stroll together.

I did not remonstrate with him many times because I feared him. One Sunday he came home and got on his knees and begged me to forgive him.

Her Feeling Cooled.

When asked what effect her husband's conduct had on her affection for her husband, Mrs. Cope replied that it caused "a great coolness" in her feeling for him.

Mrs. Cope was questioned at some length about her presence in Shaw's bedroom, to which some witnesses had previously testified. She explained by saying:

On one occasion Mr. Shaw was ill in bed, and as I was passing his bedroom he called me in and asked me to hand him his watch. He was in bed and I leaned over the bed to hand him the watch.

I went to his room on occasions when I was alone, but I always tried to leave before 9:30 o'clock.

There never was anything wrong between Mr. Shaw and myself, and he never tried to induce me to leave my husband.

Affection All Gone Now.

Under cross-examination Mrs. Cope testified that she had lost all affection for her husband a few weeks ago.

"I have had little affection for him the past six years," she said.

Mrs. Cope said she met Shaw in 1905, some time before her marriage to Cope. She knew little of him, however, until he went to live at her mother's house on Pearl street, Cambridge. The cross-examination continued as follows:

Q.—Did you kiss all the roomers in your house? A.—Never.

Q.—Did you kiss Mr. Shaw? A.—No.

Q.—You heard him say so. A.—He did not say so; he said he kissed me.

Q.—Did you think it right for Mr. Shaw to embrace you? A.—I never thought. I have let Mr. Shaw kiss me when we were fooling.

Mrs. Cope added that her husband was still paying the house rent and the coal and gas bills, and she still collected the room rent. Both Shaw and Cope were in court.

Part of Mrs. Cope's cross-examination continued as follows:

Q.—Why did you spend so much time in Mr. Shaw's room? A.—For friendship.

Q.—Did Mr. Shaw ever give you any assistance? A.—No.

Q.—You are calling on Mr. Shaw now, are you not? A.—Yes. I go over when I feel like it.

Says Cope Was Cruel to Child.

Mrs. Cope testified that at one time s Mr. and Mrs. Davis called on her and her husband. She said her husband kissed Mrs. Davis, while Mr. Davis kissed her.

"We had a good laugh about it afterward," she said.

Miss Maude Murray of No. 25 Brookline street, Cambridge, testified that Cope was cruel to his daughter Muriel. She said Cope shook the child and beat her and that he was often intoxicated.

WILSON REBUKED BY WRITER FOR SLIGHT ON MODERN HYMNS

INDIANAPOLIS, March 18.—Woodrow Wilson, who, in addition to being President of the United States, is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, came in for a rebuke at the meeting of the Christian Ministers' Association here because in an address at Trenton, N. J., he characterized some modern church songs as "silly and meaningless."

The rebuke was administered by the Rev. Charles Fillmore, a local minister, and himself the composer of many hymns. Mr. Fillmore mentioned particularly the President's disparaging reference to "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," when Mr. Wilson said that he "didn't want to float through vague seas," as suggested by the song.

FRANCES LESLIE, New York chorus girl, who was found dead mysteriously on the liner Oceanic and about whose death Broadway has woven a strange story of surmise and suspicion.

Miss Leslie was seen in Boston with the "Follies of 1912"

REVEL AT SEA NIGHT BEFORE GIRL'S DEATH

NEW YORK, March 18.—Broadway wove a fantastic background for the mystery that obscures the manner in which Frances Leslie died aboard the Oceanic last Saturday morning just before the liner berthed at Southampton.

News that a revel aboard ship preceded the girl's death has reached here.

The coroner at Southampton adjourned his inquest until April 14 so that an analysis might be made of the girl's vital organs and that the Oceanic might make another trip to New York and back.

At the same time the coroner granted permission for the shipment of the body to this country aboard the St. Paul, which sails next Saturday.

The Leslie girl dined on March 7—the evening before the Oceanic sailed—with friends to whom she talked joyously of her approaching departure for London. She said that one of the passengers aboard the liner would be a man of whom her mother was so much afraid—for the daughter's sake—that if Mrs. Schultz knew of his presence she would never consent to her going.

This man's attitude toward the Leslie girl was inspired by jealousy, her friends assert, and around him, who provoked the jealousy, was a member of the dinner party.

Between these two the girl seems to have divided her smiles until the present hostess, Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's Opera House in Kingsway, London, began the organization of an American revue for that playhouse.

Clifford Fisher and Gus Sohlke were commissioned to gather this new company, the second contingent of which sailed on the Oceanic.

The Oceanic's passengers, besides the Leslie girl, included Arthur Deagon, who had been with "The Follies of 1912." Edward Miller, another actor; Beatrix Clifford, Maida Lane and a dozen others as well known.

Fisher and Sohlke found not only an army of applicants for the places they had to fill, but they found dozens of others who were willing to help them in their selections. Among these, it was said, were Wilson Misner and John Shaughnessy.

Through the efforts of a friend of Miss Leslie she was secretly given a place in the English company at the last moment, forcing out a fellow dancer, Trixie Wilson.

These are the figures in the background that Broadway has woven for the mystery of the Leslie girl's death—the volunteer assistance of Fisher and Sohlke, who got their friends some, at least, of the most coveted berths that have piqued the desires of chorus girls this year; the girls who were made to change places at the very last moment; the interceding friend of the one who had the place and who was said last night to have sailed on the Oceanic in the belief that she was to be aboard; the jealous friend of the girls who got the place and celebrated her luck with another friend the night before.

One thing is certain. It was a very lively party which crossed on the Oceanic and all stayed up practically all through the last night at sea, although Frances Leslie hadn't been so conspicuous in convivialities as some others.

MAXINE ELLIOTT BRIDE IN TENNIS COURT ROMANCE

Maxine Elliott, the beautiful American actress, and former wife of Nat Goodwin, is the bride of Anthony F. Wilding, the famous English tennis player, according to cables from London today. Miss Elliott will retire from the stage, it is believed.

Miss Elliott and Mr. Wilding were married at Nice last Friday, according to the report which came by way of the French Riviera. The report also gives some details as to how Cupid, armed with a racquet, netted the pair. It was a romance of the tennis courts, so the report has it, and they decided to let the mach rest at "love."

Simple Prescription Wonderful Kidney and Bladder Cure

The following simple prescription has become famous on account of its remarkable cures in cases of kidney and bladder ailments. Get six ounces of good pure gin and add to it one-half ounce Murnx Compound and one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. It quickly relieves backache, rheumatic pains in the joints, and other well known symptoms, which can hardly be mentioned here. The ingredients can be had at any good drug store and are easily mixed. Be sure to use good pure gin. Also make sure to use the genuine Murnx Compound, which comes in a sealed round tube, as a substitute will not give the desired results.

The most serious forms of kidney disease can be avoided if the above treatment is taken in time.

WHERE THE DANGER LIES

How Best to Avoid It. Facts Everybody Ought to Know

The great danger in colds at this season of the year is that they lead to pneumonia and consumption.

The moment you begin to take patent medicines and so-called cough cures, the majority of which depend entirely on nerve-deadening drugs for their effect, you weaken the body.

That takes away the vital force necessary to ward off disease, and the grip and pneumonia germs develop, and because the body is weakened is why pneumonia is so often fatal.

Father John's Medicine is not a patent medicine, and does not contain alcohol or dangerous drugs. It cures throat and lung troubles, coughs and colds.

TRY IT! SAYS SAGE TEA DARKENS AND BEAUTIFIES FADED, GRAY HAIR

Mixed with Sulphur Makes Hair Soft and Luxuriant and Removes Dandruff.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is coming in vogue again, says a well-known downtown druggist. It was our grandmother's treatment and hundreds of women and men, too, are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musky mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is the most popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply dampen a soft brush or sponge with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight, and by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides prevents dandruff; itching scalp and falling hair. Here, you gray-haired folks, get busy look years younger.

New Spring Hats

Are Price Ticketed

$5 $7.50 $10

"How much do you think it is?" we asked a woman who "knows" hats.

"$15" was the prompt answer.

The hat in question was of old gold hemp with crown covered with green chiffon and brim draped with green ribbon. Two "wing" loops were smartly posed at the back.

It was marked $5

There is a hat here for every type of face. Because they are little priced there is none the less artistry about them. Hats to frame demure faces, hats that soften the face, hats that add inches to the height and hats that seem intended for tall, willowy figures. Hats with all the dash and go that one wants on the hat for tailored suit wear, and hats that are soft and feminine.

We can't describe any one, for so many of them find a happy wearer almost as soon as they come from our milliners' hands. And the individual is the point to be considered in the choice of a hat.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN AMONG WITNESSES AS EATON INQUEST IS RESUMED TODAY

WEYMOUTH PEOPLE CALLED BY INVESTIGATORS INTO ADMIRAL'S DEATH.

the first on hand. He came over from Brockton in a taxi.

In front of the Water Company's building Mr. Barker ran into State Officer John Scott. The reporters were quizzing Scott about any more summonses he had served. Scott said:

"Condon and I served summonses on possibly five witnesses last night. I will not say who they are or where they live."

As it was known that the State officer and the deputy sheriff were in Weymouth last night the inference was open that Weymouth people were to be heard.

It was in Weymouth that Mrs. Eaton and her elder daughter, Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes, then June Ainsworth, went three years ago, when Mrs. Eaton separated from the Admiral, following the death of their adopted baby.

District Attorney Barker was asked if Mrs. Eaton would be a witness today.

"Probably Mrs. Eaton will not be called today," he replied. "But he would not say positively.

Conference in Judges' Office.

Judge Edward B. Pratt, before whom the inquest is being held, arrived and, with the District Attorney and State Officer, went upstairs to his private office, adjoining the court room. There was a brief conference.

Scott came downstairs and at the same time Deputy Sheriff George W. Conant of South Weymouth, a Norfolk County officer, arrived.

"Witness or spectator?" Conant was asked.

"Been summoned as a witness," he replied briefly. This was in line with the presumption that Weymouth people were to be heard.

Ernest Sparrell, the Norwell undertaker, arrived by automobile. It was Mr. Sparrell who was called to the Eaton house right after the admiral died and who was about to prepare the body for burial when embalming proceedings were abruptly halted by a telephone message from Dr. Joseph Frame, the Eaton family physician. Mr. Sparrell dodged cameras to the best of his ability and hurried up to the court anteroom.

Court Stenographer Edgett came. Mr. Edgett has acquired the reputation among the reporters of being somewhat less loquacious than the late Mr. Sphinx.

The inquest began at 10 o'clock with Undertaker Sparrell as the first witness. He could tell the court, and the District Attorney how he was called to the Eaton home, how he started to embalm the body of the Admiral and how he received the famous message from Dr. Frame to do nothing until the doctor arrived.

Mysterious Woman Arrives.

Deputy Sheriff Conant of South Weymouth was scheduled for the next witness. It was expected that the Norfolk County officer would relate what he had found out of Mrs. Eaton's temporary residence in Weymouth with her elder daughter.

This was the first entry in the case, by the way, of an officer of another county than Plymouth.

At 10:30 a slender woman, clad in brown suit, came to the court building. She was about thirty years old. Deputy Sheriff Condon met her on the sidewalk and escorted her to Judge Pratt's private office, saying:

"Wait here until you are called."

The woman was mysterious. She refused to tell her name. She admitted she had been summoned as a witness in the Eaton case.

ADMIRAL'S MIND WEAK, MRS. EATON SAID TO A NEIGHBOR IN AUGUST, '09

Mrs. Eaton made a statement to a close neighbor in August, 1909, following the death of her adopted son, of the same nature as that made by her oldest daughter, June, concerning the Admiral's alleged proneness for experimenting with drugs and alleged threats to poison members of the family.

She said:

You don't know—you can't realize what kind of a man the Admiral is in private life. While I know the doctors say that the baby was not poisoned, you can never convince me that he was not. I left the baby that day lying asleep on the veranda of our cottage at Scituate Harbor. He was in perfect health. It was not possible for any child as healthy and as normal as he to undergo such a change in so amazingly short a time.

How the Baby Died.

The child was asleep in a baby carriage on the piazza when myself and my daughter June went to the bathing beach. The Admiral was in charge of the child. When I returned with my daughter the baby was in convulsions. Medical aid was rendered and everything possible done to save the life of the infant, but it died the following day.

Ever since I have returned to live with the Admiral after our separation I've been afraid he might poison me. Myself and daughters have had to watch our food. I was afraid to even eat chocolate or anything at that time.

I did not dare to leave my oldest daughter in the house alone when the Admiral was there for fear something might happen to her. I was careful her door was locked. I always kept a careful watch on the Admiral, for I didn't know at any time what might happen.

Mind Affected, She Says.

To see him in public you would never expect anything was wrong with the man, but I know there was. He was an entirely different man in private life. Nobody knows what I have been through with him. My daughter June was in constant fear.

The Admiral was a man of queer ideas. Perhaps his long life on shipboard accounted for the queer way he acted. He was always a liberal entertainer and I have no doubt that his mode of life has affected his mind. At any rate I have thought for a long time that he was not in his right mind and on that account never took my eyes from him. I have been very careful of all the victuals to see no harm came to any of us.

Neighbors say that poison figured peculiarly in the Eaton household for three years or more and that tragedy seemed to hang over it. That is why there was no more surprise at the present inquiry.

RALPH S. KEYES, husband of elder daughter of Admiral Eaton's widow, who has figured prominently in probe into death of naval hero.

EATON WAS WELL AT PARTY TUESDAY, YOUNG WOMAN GUEST SAYS

Since the mystery in the death of Rear Admiral Eaton began the so-called "pork party" has figured rather prominently. It has been hinted that this feast may have contributed to the admiral's death, but disclosures today tend to discredit this theory. In fact, the latest information shows that there was not any "pork party" at all. Admiral Eaton may have partaken of the tenderloin of a fresh killed pig, but if he did, it was at a family meal and latest reports deny that he "gorged himself."

The gathering that gave rise to the "pork party" rumor, was held at the Eaton home, Tuesday evening, three nights before the admiral's death. Among the guests was Miss Amy Curtis. Miss Curtis lives in a trim white cottage on the brow of the hill overlooking the Eaton home, and just around the bend of the same road. When seen by an AMERICAN reporter Miss Curtis said:

That report about a "pork party" seems to have grown out of a gathering which we had at the Eaton home on the Tuesday before the admiral died.

It was a meeting of the Christian Union connected with the First Universalist Church of Assinippi. Dorothy Ainsworth is a member. The meetings are held once a month, and we assemble at the homes of different members.

Says Admiral Was Happy at Party.

Fifteen or twenty of us attended. It was not a party in the sense of a feast. We had a jolly time after transacting routine business. We had candy. No, it was not fudge. I think it was store candy. No other refreshments were served.

While we were there Admiral Eaton came into the room. We gathered in the large, oblong room on the left of the front hall. It is a splendid place for such a gathering. Admiral Eaton looked well and happy. He was cheerful with us all and extremely courteous and hospitable.

Mrs. Eaton came into the room also. I cannot recall whether both were in the room with us at the same time. We saw no evidence of anything out of the way. Mrs. Harrison did not join us. The admiral showed some of us his curios and relics. He had a wonderfully interesting collection gathered from different parts of the world while on his naval tours. He pointed out many of them to me.

His paintings are beautiful, and he had many books. We gathered at the house about 8 o'clock and remained until about 10. June was not there. We didn't see or hear anything about a pork feast. There is some mistake about that, I believe. As I said before, all we had was candy and a very pleasant time.

WHY EATON CASE POINTS TO FOUL PLAY THEORY

Chemical analysis shows Admiral Eaton was poisoned.

Professor Whitney, who made the analysis, refers all inquirers to District Attorney Barker, leaving the inference that serious discoveries have been made.

The District Attorney of Plymouth County is devoting all his time to the Eaton investigation.

Inquest proceedings extend to the Eaton home. Even the death scene is re-enacted. New witnesses are summoned as the scope of the inquest widens.

Eaton house at Assinippi is under surveillance night and day.

The house has been searched.

Judge Pratt, presiding at inquest, admits case is "important."

ADMIRAL PAID HIGH TRIBUTE TO NAVY IN LAST PUBLIC SPEECH

Though buried without naval honors, Admiral Eaton's love for the navy and for his country was not to be questioned. At his last public appearance, at Dracut, on June 12, 1901, at the two-hundredth anniversary of the town, he paid a glowing tribute to the American navy in response to the toast "To the American Navy." It was the admiral's last public appearance. The admiral said in part:

The sailor that was born on this coast and in these towns has ever borne in mind the fact that he was a free man, fighting for victory and fighting with all his mind and strength.

If there is one lesson that we have learned in this last war, it is that no amount of innate courage will carry a man successfully through a modern battle. It is the disciplined courage, the unerring aim of the gunner, the brain of the commander that drives the enemy from the field.

The guns which Admiral Cervera used were equal to the guns in Sampson's fleet. I can bear testimony that in natural bravery the Spanish fighters were not to be excelled, but it was the discipline of the American sailor that won them, as it always will.

The American sailor is a hard man to train. He is a hard man to teach subordination. He is not only as good as anybody else, but he is better than anybody else, when he first comes aboard ship. He doesn't remain better long. He finds his place on the social ladder and, having found it, keeps it well.

It is that quality of individualism which he possesses that contributes to make him so valuable when the toesin of battle sounds.

SEEK CAUSE OF DOCTOR'S HURRIED CALL FOR AUTOPSY ON ADMIRAL

INQUIRY GROWS AS TO WHAT DID FRAME DISCOVER WHEN HE VIEWED BODY.

Did Dr. Joseph Frame, the Eaton family physician, notice anything about the condition of the rear admiral before his death that aroused his suspicions and led him to summon the medical examiner even before he saw the admiral's body?

That is the important question just now in the Assinippi death inquiry. It is the latest in a number of conundrums that have placed the Eaton case among the most absorbing and baffling of New England mysteries.

Developments today strongly indicated that Dr. Frame may have had some prior knowledge. It was he who started the inquiry by his notice to Medical Examiner Osgood. Dr. Frame is looked upon as one of the keys to the situation. He has been as silent as he has been active. He has consistently shooed off all interviewers.

But Dr. Frame undoubtedly has a fund of information. It is known that he treated Mrs. George Harrison, mother of Mrs. Eaton at the Eaton home on Washington street Friday, March 7, and that he "took a look at Mr. Eaton" while there.

Members of the Eaton household declare that Admiral Eaton was taken sick on Thursday. Right here comes a conflict which Dr. Frame refuses to explain. For instance, Dr. Frame is credited with having stated that when he saw the admiral that day he looked as healthy as ever.

Undertaker Halted by Phone Call.

The first report circulated was that Dr. Frame saw the admiral at the doctor's office in Rockland, but this was later corrected. The place where Dr. Frame saw Admiral Eaton on that Friday was at the Eaton home, after having treated Mrs. Harrison.

That point has been apparently settled. But if the story told by members of the household, to the effect that Admiral Eaton was taken sick Thursday are true how could he have so far recovered by Friday to be regarded by a physician as well and normal, and die some time that night or early next morning?

Hence the question again:

Did Dr. Frame notice anything significant when he saw the admiral that Friday and if so, what was it?

This vital query is given weight by the telephone call that interrupted the undertaker and his assistant when they were on the point of embalming the naval officer's body on Saturday, the morning of his death.

Undertaker Ernest Sparrell of Norwell had set up his table in the admiral's room and had completed all preparations for embalming when Mrs. Eaton's voice was heard at the bottom of the stairs:

"There is a telephone call for you, Mr. Sparrell, next door at the Simons," said Mrs. Eaton.

Herbert Simons had brought the call. Undertaker Sparrel accompanied Simons to the latter's home a few hundred feet away. He found Mrs. Sparrell at the other end of the wire.

"Dr. Frame wants you to call him up right away," said Mrs. Sparrell.

An Assistant at Autopsy.

Undertaker Sparrell tried to reach Dr. Frame's office from the Simons telephone, but failed to get a connection. Then he went to a corner grocery opposite the Assinippi postoffice. When he succeeded in getting Dr. Frame's office Medical Examiner Osgood was there. Dr. Osgood warned Sparrell not to touch the admiral's body or to inject any embalming fluid in it.

So the undertaker and his assistant quit their work until Dr. Osgood reached the house. That afternoon Medical Examiner Osgood performed the autopsy at the Eaton home, assisted by Dr. Wheatley of North Abington, who has been as dumbas all others officially connected with the case.

Then, nearly twelve hours later, Undertaker Sparrell prepared the remains for burial. He had been summoned to the Eaton home by Mrs. Eaton shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday morning. It is figured that Admiral Eaton died about 4 o'clock or just before dawn.

Sparrell and his assistant reached the Admiral's home shortly after 7. The admiral hadn't been dead three hours, according to the testimony given by Mrs. Harrison, the mother of Mrs. Eaton. Undertaker Sparrell said he found the body in the bed, clad only in a nightrobe, with the bed clothing drawn up about it. The community is eager to learn what Dr. Frame could have known or what impelled him to notify the medical examiner before he saw the body himself.

Acute Poison Indicated.

This query can be answered in part by the statement that it is customary for attending physicians to notify the medical examiner in the event of a sudden or violent death.

It is pointed out, however, to offset this explanation, that Admiral Eaton's death could not be classified as a sudden death if he had been ill since Thursday.

Charles H. Lapham, aged eighty-one, a neighbor at Assinippi, said that he and other neighbors were told that Admiral Eaton had been seized with convulsions and that he had been vomiting nearly twelve hours. This, if correct, would indicate some acute poison.

WOMEN PROMINENT AS DEATH SCENE IS ENACTED AGAIN AT EATON HOME

How the death of Rear Admiral Eaton was re-enacted in the Eaton home at Assinippi for the benefit of District Attorney Albert F. Barker and the police officials now investigating this most mysterious case became known today in detail.

The tragic drama of March 8, which marked the passing of Admiral Eaton, was lent added solemnity because it was performed by the surviving members of the family, at the behest of the law.

But the principal character in the original scene was of course absent. How the Admiral was found groaning on the floor by his bed, how he was assisted back to bed and how he died were retold, so that the District Attorney and his legal and medical associates might get the full family description of the death morning.

It was a singular scene, almost to the point of being weird. It was one with hardly a parallel in Massachusetts legal investigations.

View Death Chamber.

But, so serious is the official view of this case, it was deemed necessary for the investigators to view the very death chamber, to see the bed upon which Rear Admiral Eaton breathed his last, to note the room and its connection with others in the house.

It was the legal effort to get what is known in writing terms as the "atmosphere" of the subject, to visualize, so far as possible, the death which took place before dawn on March 8 and which was destined to become a subject of country State and national interest.

So members of the household put the death of the Admiral before the eyes of the officers as well as possible. It was not unlike a stage production, with the star's part described by other members of the company. When a stage star is absent an understudy fills the part. There was no understudy here. Inquest realism did not attempt that much. But, from the lips of others, the officials were told what the Admiral did.

It was truly an odd scene for the peaceful country village of Assinippi in the western part of Norwell township.

It stretched neighborhood curiosity like a taut wire. From nearest homes people watched the Eaton home. The least coming or going from the Eaton premises was enough to set this wire of curiosity leaping to high pitch.

House Carefully Guarded.

Deputy Sheriff J. Frank Hammond stood on guard, pacing up and down the 200 feet of driveway from Washington street to the Eaton household. Reporters, neighbors and all others except officials and their associates were barred.

At the head of the investigating party was District Attorney Barker, the "man-behind-the-probe."

In charge of the hearing itself was Special Justice Edward B. Pratt of Second Plymouth District Court, sitting at Abington and Hingham.

Dr. Joseph Frame of Rockland, the Eatons' family physician and the first doctor arriving after the Admiral died, came with the District Attorney and the judge. State Officer John Scott of Braintree, and Deputy Sheriff John H. Cotton of Rockland, who have none the outside investigating, were also there.

For two hours and a quarter the Eaton household served the purpose of a courthouse, so far as sheltering an inquest goes.

Widow Is Questioned.

The members of the Eaton family present were Mrs. Eaton, the widow, Mrs. George Harrison, her aged mother, who has been ill; and her two daughters, Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes of Dorchester, and Miss Dorothy V. Ainsworth Eaton. These are the Admiral's stepdaughters, who hold such widely divergent opinions of him.

Much of the time in the house was taken up by questioning Mrs. Harrison. She told what she knew of the Admiral's death. Her testimony is described as of the utmost importance.

Here is what Mrs. Eaton told the police and inquest officials of the happenings in the Eaton house on the night Admiral Eaton died:

I hadn't been feeling well. I went to bed earlier than the others last Friday night. Between cat-naps I heard them talking downstairs. Later I heard my daughter and her daughter Dorothy attending Admiral Eaton, who had been taken ill.

That must have been midnight or after. I fell asleep again. Some time later I heard a sound as if Mr. Eaton had fallen out of bed. I told my daughter and she and Dorothy rushed into Mr. Eaton's room.

Heard Dorothy Say "He's Gone."

I heard them talking and administering to him, but did not get up then.

Finally I fell asleep again. It was close to daybreak, fully two hours after the first noise, that I heard voices in Eaton's room again.

They were more excited this time. I heard Dorothy say, "He's gone." Then my daughter came into my room and told me Mr. Eaton was dead. I got up as I was and went to the room. He was in bed.

My daughter told me that when she and Dorothy had rushed into his room when I heard the noise the admiral was falling; they had found Mr. Eaton sitting on the floor with his head thrown back on the bed.

They said he was conscious, but stupefied and dazed at first. He was in pain. They spoke to him and finally he answered them. They helped him into bed and he told them he began to feel better right away.

Woke to Find Him Dead.

My daughter and Dorothy had been sleeping in an adjoining room. After finding Mr. Eaton on the floor my daughter got into bed with him in order to be near.

She soon fell into a sound slumber. It was about two hours later, nearly daybreak, when she said she woke up with a peculiar numb, cold feeling in her arm. She found her arm thrown across her husband and his body was so cold it had chilled it.

He felt so strange she shuddered and drew away at first. Then she looked closer and was horrified to find that he was dead. She then called Dorothy and then they woke me.

Having heard from Mrs. Harrison's lips what she knew of the Admiral's death, and having gently cross-questioned the venerable woman, the officials then went into the death chamber—the very room where the Admiral died.

There the last act in the dramatic career of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, U. S. N., retired, was re-enacted, so far as possible.

It has been said of Admiral Eaton that, naval hero and holder of Congressional medals though he was, nothing in his life gained him and his such publicity as the leaving of it.

This grim truth was emphasized all the more by the serious re-setting of his demise.

Details of Death Retold.

The room was the same. There was the bed upon which the naval commander passed away. It was near the bed that Mrs. Eaton found him groaning upon the floor when she and Miss Dorothy ran in to see what was the matter.

It was on this bed that Mrs. Eaton lay by her husband's side when he died.

The big and little details of this grim scene were told to the officials so that the sad scene in the Eaton death chamber, just before dawn on March 8, was almost reproduced before their very sight.

Mrs. Eaton told of being called by her mother to see what was transpiring in the Admiral's room. She described going into the death chamber with Miss Dorothy and finding the Admiral on the floor, leaning against the bed.

The place where the Admiral lay on the floor was indicated to the officials. They heard how the wife and stepdaughter helped get the dying man back into bed and how Mrs. Eaton lay beside him.

Then they were told how Mrs. Eaton awakened to find that the tragic drama had come to its climax and Life's curtain had descended forever for Admiral Eaton.

A Good Shampoo For Only One Cent
"At last it seems that a genuine remedy for hair and scalp troubles has been found," writes Miss Martyn in the Spokane Leader. "The problem of lifeless, unattractive hair and dandruff, diseased scalps appears to be solved. I find that these conditions disappear famous and if by magic by shampooing the hair with plain canthrox.
"To prepare the shampoo, simply dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. It makes an abundant lather that cleanses perfectly and rinses easily. The beauty of this shampoo is that it dries very quickly and seems to invigorate and put new life into the hair and scalp. It makes the hair glossy, fluffy and easy to do up. The cost of canthrox is but little and it has the inexpressible approval of every woman who uses it."

NEWS OF ATTRACTIONS AT THE BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

BERNARD SHAW PLAY GIVEN AT THE PLYMOUTH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

As a master satirist George Bernard Shaw stands quite alone. This fact was driven home without unnecessary frills at the Plymouth last evening when "Man and Superman," after an absence of six years, was again held out to the local playgoer.

Shaw's bitter, but exceedingly amusing, slap at moral conventions made the comedy chiefly a matter for adult consideration and entertainment. It is no play for children.

In the hands of Robert Loraine's "London" company "Man and Superman" was as exquisitely brilliant and entertaining as anything that has moved this way in months. The lapse of six years has neither robbed the play of its charm or made it old-fashioned, and the "London" company, which was made up principally of American actor-folk of familiar reputation, treated the revival sensibly and intelligently.

Mr. Loraine himself exhibited a rare affection for his old role of John Tanner by contributing a faultless performance. He applied himself diligently to a hard working part and came through with flying colors. There was not a moment when Mr. Loraine did not have his audience in the palm of his hand. He easily impressed you as being the right man on the job—which is frequently enough to save a bad play. In "Man and Superman" it merely provided an added joy to a splendid performance.

Above all things Bernard Shaw is frank. There is no question too delicate for him to discuss satirically. And in "Man and Superman" he treated the established moral conventions of sex relationship as the merest piffle. It made good, lively comedy, but it was stiff medicine for sensitive ears. With less brilliant dialogue than that which flows from the Shaw pen it would not be tolerated.

Nevertheless "Man and Superman" was capital entertainment. The audacity of the author, backed by his matchless wit and skill in turning pointed phrases, gave Mr. Loraine's company material to work with that left them but little opportunity to fail in their evening's task. Miss Emily Stevens made Mr. Shaw's "pursuing female" a dainty, merciless creature. There was an unmistakable charm in her hypocrisy and deceit. She was a character that you should abhor—but didn't. Alfred Hickman played the sentimental poet in a spineless kind of style that safely fitted into things, and Louis Masson's Ramsden was not as dreadful as his first act bluster promised to make him. Marguerite Cuett, A. P. Kaye and Rockliffe Fellowes contributed moments of good acting.

Mr. Loraine's share in the evening's work left nothing to be desired, yet no actor could ask for more agreeable material upon which to test his talents.

EDISON TALKING PICTURES DRAW AT THE NATIONAL

Edison's talking pictures, with new subjects, and the Kinemacolor, together with an all-star vaudeville attraction, proved an unfailing attraction at the National Theatre. The holiday crowds taxed the house to capacity.

A thrilling production from start to finish is seen in Thurston McCormick's melodramatic production, "Forty-four Limited." It kept the audience in a state of excitement all the time.

Plenty of laughter was furnished by Brown, Harris and Brown, who present one of the best eccentric comedy acts in American vaudeville. Kingsbury and Munson proved most popular with their neat comedy diversion, while Fitzsimmons and Cameron were sure acts in their somewhat out-of-the-ordinary production. As a foolish country girl comedienne, the young lady is a real artist.

Herbert and Dennis provided plenty of amusement while they were on the stage with their performance, and Foster and his dog gave a remarkable exhibition of canine cleverness. The Zeraldas closed the bill with sensational feats.

SONG BIRDS AND OTHER BIG ACTS ON KEITH BILL

There are several topliners in the bill at Keith's Theatre this week. One of them, the novelty of the year, was William Burress and company of thirty song birds. There was Madame Yelba, Tetlezini, Robinson Caruso and Oscar Hammershine. The voices of the artists were clear and silvery. Several of them had a wonderful range, and the selections included "Flee," "Hammershine," "Mazuma" and "The Battle of B Flat."

The principal artists were Miss Clements, Madame Montero and Messrs. Marius, Durand, Andeline and Fischer. The scene was the stage of the Metropolis Theatre.

Japan is represented in the bill by a troupe of her most famous athletes. There were acrobats, equilibrists and jugglers. The stage setting was distinctly Japanese, and some of the feats seemed almost impossible.

The Bison City Four presented comedy and music. Their voices were well blended and their harmony perfect. Their intermediate acts were laughable. The Poizin brothers furnished something entirely new in comiques. All they used was a teeter board, but they did some tumbling that made the audience gasp.

The dancing of Mabel and Dora Ford was classical and well executed. From the Greek dance they varied into the "Lazy Moon" step. The final number was a "Solo and Ensemble Terpsichore." Carl Henry and Nellie Francis did clever work in "Just a Little Nonsense."

Two new pictures were presented by Thomas A. Edison's kinetophone. They were entitled, "The Redemption" and the miser scene from "The Chimes of Normandy." In both, the voices of the actors could be clearly heard and one could well imagine it a stage production.

Other numbers were the Cavana Duo in music and mirth, Dolly Morrissey, the dainty singing comedienne, and Frances Stevens and company in the farce, "The Country Bride." Pathe Weekly showed new pictures of current events of international interest.

Grand Opera House.

Matt Kennedy and "The Tiger Lilies" supplied the burlesque entertainment at the Grand Opera House yesterday. It was a lively show.

Howard Athenaeum.

"Miss New York, Jr.," was the title hitched to the new burlesque attraction at the Old Howard yesterday. It was a merry affair, with plenty of pretty girls to give it color.

'ELECTRICAL MARVEL' AMAZES AUDIENCES AT GLOBE THEATRE

Annie Abbott, the "Electrical Marvel," —although she has not played an engagement in Boston in several years—found a house full of friends at the Globe yesterday, all of whom seemed to remember her from her many other visits. Neither her old nor her new friends were disappointed in the marvellous exhibition given by the remarkable little woman, as her many demonstrations were mystifying, and at all times entertaining. There is a lot of fun in watching big strong men try to lift the frail little woman—and fail. The surrounding show is one that any theatre could be proud to have. The Le Van Trio of gymnasts did new tricks—and funny ones—Barry and Mildred had a great laughing act in "Reilley's Mistake," a most acceptable fun play; Farley and Morrison entertained well with songs and small talk; Ted Snyder's Serenaders sang the popular Berlin hits to many enthusiastic recalls; the Peerless Macks had one of the "classiest" dancing acts seen in a long time; Zeda and Hoot had a distinct novelty in their scenic offering, "The Fiery Dragon and the Owl"; Laurie and Aleen were two clever young people, and Taboldi, the Russian boy violinist, gave a program that was varied and just suited to a vaudeville audience.

The other features, including motion pictures, were all excellent. The pictures will be changed on Thursday.

Loew's South End.

The popularity of Loew's South End Theatre is increasing every week. As it is the largest theatre in the city devoted exclusively to pictures, and as it has facilities for presenting a bigger and longer show than most houses of its kind, there is plenty of reason for its growing patronage. The bill this week is a spectacular one, in that more than 50,000 feet of new film are being given. The program covers every phase of dramatic entertainment—comedy, farce, tragedy and spectacular subjects. New songs were also given by new singers yesterday.

New Palace Theatre.

Most picture theatres have a change of program twice each week, but at the New Palace Theatre this week there are to be three complete changes. The bill presented yesterday, in which "Lost Memory" was featured, will be changed tomorrow, and on Friday there will be another new program. The quality of the pictures at the Palace has drawn many regular patrons to that house, for the list of subjects is carefully selected, with the one idea of giving variety to the entertainment.

Waldron's Casino.

There was more than the usual run of comedy and music in "The Girls of the Gay White Way" at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. The show was smartly presented, and the girls were especially lively on their feet.

4,000 ACTORS IN BURLESQUE MERGER PLAN

The burlesque merger which has astonished the theatrical world by reason of its sweeping effect upon popular priced amusement, will, if the plans of the merger are carried through, as they are now arranged, reduce organized burlesque operations in Boston exactly 50 per cent—or, at least, as much as is involved in the business now conducted at the Howard Athenaeum and the Grand Opera House.

In absorbing the Empire circuit, in which Boston is represented by the Howard and Grand Opera House, the Columbia Amusement Company will doubtless protect its own properties, which means that next season traveling burlesque companies will be seen at only the Gaiety and Casino Theatres.

The importance of the merger in the popular priced amusement field is best grasped when the figures involved are considered. The Empire circuit, which is also nkown as the Western Wheel, will turn over to the Columbia—known as the Eastern Wheel—ten theatres and ten franchisis for road companies. It is expected that the remaining theatres in the Empire circuit, which were not taken over in the merger, will cease playing burlesque attractions. The merger will not only extend to operations of the Columbia Amusement Company, but it will reduce competition in nearly every city now covered by both organizations.

The deal not only involves $15,000,000 in theatre property, but it affects the affairs of nearly four thousand actors.

Gaiety Theatre.

Janitor Higgins is in town again. He arrived at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday with "The Ginger Girls," and the fun began immediately. The fame of Janitor Higgins has spread all over the country—at least, over that portion of it where "The Ginger Girls" and Ed Lee Wrothe visit. Mr. Wrothe is Janitor Higgins in that liveliest of burlesques, and the first warning of his approach always sends inquiries to the theatre in which he is to appear. The show at the Gaiety yesterday lived up to its reputation as one of the live wires on the Eastern Wheel. Mr. Wrothe was assisted by a score of lively and likable young women. It was burlesque with a punch.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Irish players in an Irish playlet were presented in the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. Other vaudeville and new picture subjects were also included in the day's entertainment.

MISS STANWOOD'S SKETCH, 'THE SHOJI,' AT TOY THEATRE

Miss Louie R. Stanwood, Boston playwright, again proved her skill in plot creation and detail when her sketch, "The Shoji," was presented at the Toy Theatre. It is the story of a Japanese wife who, shut within her shadowed home, fails to comprehend the beauty and cheerfulness of the bright out-of-doors until another Japanese woman, one who has lived in America, reveals to the little wife what may be found in the world outside.

Mercedes-Teresa Huntington, in recitation of French verses, and Edward Vroom in a playlet, and readings from Shakespeare, completed the evening. Mr. Vroom, a widely known Shakespearian actor, was well received in "King Lear," "Macbeth" and "Hamlet."

Next Week's Bills.

"The Round Up," with Macklyn Arbuckle in the role of "Slim" Hoover, will come to the Boston Theatre next Monday.

"The Irish Players" will return to the Plymouth next week in a repertoire that will include several plays that were not presented on their former visit.

Otis Skinner, in "Kismet," will be the new attraction at the Hollis next week.

"Top o' the Mornin'," with Tim Murphy and Gertrude Quinlan, will move into the Tremont next Monday.

Helen Keller will deliver a public lecture in Tremont Temple next Monday evening.

Scenic Temple.

The new bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday was arranged with special reference to St. Patrick's Day. There were both vaudeville and motion picture features.

CARUSO AT OPERA TONIGHT; PAGLIACCI THE BILL CHOSEN

Tonight will bring the only Caruso performance of the season at the Boston Opera House. The bill is "Pagliacci," and Mme. Melis and Anafesto Rossi will be the other stars. The opera will be preceded by Wolf-Ferrari's operetta "The Secret of Suzanne," with Miss Nielsen and MM. Fornari and Tavecchia in the chief parts.

But another week remains before the annual drawing by stockholders for seats takes place. All holders of stock who wish to participate in the drawing must file their applications for seats not later than next Monday.

St. James Theatre.

The new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday was headed by Martin and Maximilian, who contributed a burlesque illusion that was a hit from the start. This was only one of a long list of smart vaudeville acts. New pictures were also exhibited. Since passing into the hands of Marcus Loew the St. James has grown into one of the most popular vaudeville houses on the Loew circuit.

Orpheum Theatre.

A French pantomime, "La Somnambule," was featured in the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. It was one of the brightest offerings of the year. Other vaudeville features and new motion pictures completed the program.

Premier Theatre.

Special features for every day of the week is the announcement at the Premier Theatre. The feature in yesterday's program was "Thou Shalt Not Steal," a big two-serial story of great dramatic strength. The feature today is "Indian Blood," a story of the West. Special films will be shown every day during the balance of the week, and new singers will be heard.

Last Spring My Health

Was completely broken down through prolonged watching at a sick bed. My appetite was gone. I was so nervous that I could not sleep. I became pale, thin, languid, tired, looked ten years older. Through physical weakness my mental condition was affected. Hood's Sarsaparilla restored me to perfect health. It aided the wornout nerves of my stomach to do their duty. I could soon eat and sleep peacefully and felt new life course through my veins. Within six weeks I was my former self, and for a year have enjoyed the best health." Julia C. Tison, Atlantic City, N. "READY MONEY" CONTEST OPENS RIGHT MERRILY

AMERICAN readers are starting in vigorously to get that "Ready Money."

Every mail is now bringing scores of letters to this office—all of which are supplying an answer to the question: DO WOMEN LOVE MONEY MORE THAN DO MEN?

It is a big question, to be sure, but it is apparent that the readers of the AMERICAN know how to answer it.

Besides the "ready money" prizes for the best answers to the question, the AMERICAN will give seats to "Ready Money" at the Shubert Theatre. There are fifteen prizes in the contest.

"Ready Money," the comedy, is the brightest play of the season, and it answers the question asked in this contest in a very plain and emphatic way. If you should see the play it would help you frame an answer. Why not enter this contest and get some of that "Ready Money?"

A few answers, picked at random from the hundreds that were received, are published below:

Says Women Love Money.

Editor AMERICAN:

The woman of today loves money, and she is going to have money. If her husband does not earn sufficient to her liking she will get out and hustle herself. I have known a number of instances where women preferred to work in order to have pretty clothes and more spending money rather than stay at home and take what their husbands could provide.

A woman loves pretty clothes, and in order to have them she must have money. How many men we see wearing a last year's suit or a seedy overcoat while their wives are arrayed like Solomon.

Women realize this is a poor kind of a world without money. It seems to be an age of good times, dress and keeping up with your neighbors, and women love money so as to be able to do these things.

I don't think women love to hoard money, but they love the things that money buys. Money talks, and women surely love the sound of it.

MRS. CARRIE LORD.

No. 45 Hudson street, Somerville.

Love It More Than Men.

Editor AMERICAN:

Do women love money more than do men?

Men and women love money. Men and women love each other. Men and women love each other more than they love money. But women, with or without money, love men, with or without money,—less than men with money love women without money. Therefore women love money more than men love money.

M. W. BURLINGAME.

No. 113 State street, Boston.

Man the Miser, He Says.

Editor AMERICAN:

The answer, in my opinion, to your question, "Do women love money more than do men?" is NO. To corroborate this answer is not difficult. Let us take the millionaires of today as examples. What are they but money-making machines? Their whole aim in life is to make money—money—and more money. The passion to make money becomes so strongly imbedded in their minds that it stifles all other passions, and within a few years the men have become slaves to that money-making passion. At fifty the millionaire's only happiness consists in watching the figures of his bank account grow. Who is the "miser," I may ask, but the man? Has man not been recognized as the "miser" from the days of antiquity? Of course, there are exceptions to this. On the average, however, man is more inclined to become a "miser" than is woman. Women love money because of the power it has. It does not become a fetich to them as it does to men. They do not become slaves to it. To women money is merely a means by which they can satisfy some greater passion, as, for example, ambition or clothes.

N. HENRY SEABURG.

No. 977-A Tremont street, Boston.

Both to Blame, He Says.

Editor AMERICAN:

The answer can be "Yes" and also "No." We find the majority of single men so taken up with money that they enjoy life's luxuries by forsaking the young girls and lavish upon themselves all that money can buy. We also find young girls remaining single for the love of money that some young man cannot give.

We see many married men who sacrifice all for the benefit of their wives that they may enjoy life and dress well. Women show this same spirit in many instances. We find many broken-hearted women saving and starving themselves in order to get some money to be spent by an ungrateful man.

The love of money is found on both sides.

A. SULLIVAN.

No. 9 Romsey street, Dorchester.

You Just Bet They Do.

Editor AMERICAN:

Do women love money more than do men?

Well, you just bet they do!
Could money talk the answer then
Would not be up to me and you.

I wish to make it simply plain,
And 'you will agree I am truthful;
It is because women are so vain,
Want to live and dress so beautiful.

I hope that I may win a prize.
Does that sound rather funny?
But really women can be wise—
Just for the love of money.

Plays That Remain.

"Ready Money" continues on its merry way at the Shubert, where it is proving the funniest show of the year.

"The Man with Three Wives" began a new week at the Majestic last evening. It is a refreshing Lehar operetta.

"The Governor's Lady" is now on its final week at the Hollis Street Theatre.

"Officer 666" continues at the Park, where it is succeeding in its mission of laughmaking.

"The Pink Lady," at the Colonial, is finding its return engagement both merry and prosperous.

"The Garden of Allah" entered upon its final week at the Boston last evening.

"Yellow Jacket," one of the real novelties of the season, is now on its final week at the Tremont.

"Believe Me, Xantippe," is still running strong at the Castle Square Theatre. It will reach its 100th performance this evening.

Miss Blake Declares that, of Course, Women Love Money—Yes, a Little More Than Do Men.

Panama Canal Is Shown in Colors at Tremont Temple

At Tremont Temple this week thousands will take advantage of the opportunity to see that marvel of the ages, the Panama Canal, through the medium of another world wonder, the Kinemacolor. The opening was successful, a crowded house presaging a big attendance for the week. It was a delighted and enthusiastic audience.

"The Making of the Panama Canal in Kinemacolor" was the title given to the color films. No detail of the wonderful activities from Panama to Colon was overlooked, and as it ran before one's eyes every object sharply defined in its natural colors, it was not hard to imagine that one was seated in a comfortable observation car watching the actual progress of the work.

There were mighty earth slides, swift moving dirt trains, laborers and mechanics of every complexion, ponderous concrete machinery, steam shovels and dredges, hydraulic excavating and every detail of the work going on in the bright light of the tropical sun. Every hue and tint, even to the white hot rivets and the red flames in the giver forges, were faithfully portrayed. One of the many real tragedies of the work was even enacted on the screen, a negro workman being drowned at the mouth of a big suction dredge before help could reach him.

The wonderful locks at Miraflores and Gatun, compared to which the pyramids of Egypt are as the Bunker Hill monument to a tiltpost, were shown from every angle.

In addition to the Canal pictures several films showing Balkan war scenes were shown. These showed many incidents of the retreat of the Turks and the resistless advance of the Allies, also the rugged country in which the conflict is raging and several of the beautiful and picturesque cities captured by the Allies.

Caruso, Who Draws $3,500 for an Opera, Hints He's Underpaid

Is Caruso—the great Enrico—underpaid?

The great tenor apparently thinks he is.

During an interview at the Hotel Lenox he said that "even the highest salaried artists are underpaid." Doesn't that imply something in Caruso's case?

Caruso is in Boston for his annual appearance at the Boston Opera House tonight as Canio in "I Pagliacci." Talking about salaries he said:

With me, as with the others, it is like this. I sing—and nothing else. I am not a lawyer, I am not a doctor, nor an engineer—I am only a singer. If my voice should go tomorrow, what could I do to earn money? When my voice is gone—and the best pair of shoes made will wear out some day—I must have something to live on.

Salary note.—Report has it the greatest of all tenors gets $3,500 per opera. It may be more, and certainly isn't much less.

SOCIETY WOMEN TO GIVE PERFORMANCE

A large company of society women have given their services for two entertainments to be given at the Boston Opera House in aid of the Sharon Sanatorium on Thursday afternoon, April 3, and Friday evening, April 4. "Pandora's Box" will be given an elaborate setting. The performance will open with a prologue written by Mrs. Steele Mackaye.

Nine-Tenths of the People of Today are Victims of Debility

This New Ailment Which Was Unknown a Few Years Ago Has Now Assumed All the Proportions of a Peril That Is National—Tona Vita Is Already Bringing Fresh Vigor and Vitality to Many Thousands That Have Long Been Feeling Run-Down and Nervous.

Nervous debility is extremely prevalent all over the United States.

The boasted American push and success are being bought at a tremendous expenditure, because it would not be exaggerating to say that 90 per cent. of the American people are afflicted with this run-down condition.

So prevalent has nervous debility become that it has assumed the proportions of a national ailment. This should make Tona Vita the national tonic.

Tona Vita has been bringing new vigor and vitality to many thousands of people who have expressed their symptoms as being run-down. It has saved hundreds of people, wrecked by nervous debility, from the operating table, since one of the commonest symptoms of nervous debility is the fact that the patient believe they are suffering from s kinds of organic ailments.

A few of the symptoms that it r lately relieved are:—a feeling of ing overstrained; sick headach night sweats, and a general r down feeling.

A fresh consignment of Tona Vi has been delivered to all drug s in Boston and there will be m local citizens who will soon be ing that the vigor and vitali youth has once more return them.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

She Darkened Her Gray Hair

A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

Mrs. A. Biggam, a well known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves any scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."—Advertisement.

SAVES ELDERLY PEOPLE FROM KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Sleep Disturbing Bladder Weakness, Backache, Stiff Joints, Rheumatic Pains Disappear After Few Doses Are Taken

While people along in years are naturally more subject to weak kidneys, they can avoid the tortures of backache, and rheumatism, and be saved the annoyance of getting up at night with disagreeable bladder disorders, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly relieves the most severe and obstinate cases.

Croxone cures these conditions because it removes the cause. It is the most wonderful remedy ever devised for ridding the system of uric acid. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. Croxone makes the kidneys filter the blood and sift out all the poisonous acids and waste matter that cause these troubles.

It soaks right in and cleans out the clogged-up, inactive kidneys like water does a sponge, dissolves, and drives out every particle of uric acid and other poisonous impurities that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause rheumatism. It neutralizes the urine so it no longer irritates the bladder, overcomes unnecessary breaking of sleep and restores the kidneys and bladder to health and strength.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what else you have used. The very principle of Croxone is such that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it, and all your misery and suffering soon disappear. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

THE HOUSE ON THE MARSH

A Celebrated Novel by Florence Warden

PART I.

THE speaker, a man and a woman, as I could already tell by their voices, to be coming along the path. Whether they might be, I would wait until they and gave me before I went in. I could not see them, of course, but I could hear them, and I knew.

When they were a little nearer I recognized Sarah's voice the other was that of a man of a class much higher than her own. Could it be the stranger? He was talking familiarly and seriously with her. I could tell that before I heard any words. Sarah was speaking in a tone of utter complaint, and the first words I heard were here.

"I won't stand it much longer—and so I tell you."

"Tell him, my dear Sally—if you dare. And now oblige me by speaking a little lower, for there is nothing like trees for carrying tales."

She began again in a lower voice, but in the same tone and from the occasional words I heard—for I could not help listening—I gathered that she was angry because some unknown "he" paid too much attention to some unknown "her".

But I could guess who they were. Sarah, I was well known in the house, had an admirer, a man some years younger than herself, who lived a long way off—in London, I think I had heard it said—and who paid her visits at irregular intervals.

So Sarah was giving vent to her jealousy in an earnest and intluente conversation with her master's guest.

It seemed a very strange proceeding. I knew that men in the position of gentlemen treat women of a lower class with more consideration than is necessary when they are young and pretty, but Sarah's face, which looked as if it was worn out and stupid before its time with hard work and strong passions, was more repellant than attractive, and I was glad I could not see it as I heard her fierce words more plainly, and knew that her great black eyes must be flashing and her mouth twitching, as they did whenever she was annoyed.

"I tell you that I've done for him; think how I've worked for him!" she said. "He would never be where he is now if it wasn't for me. Does he think his fine fancy will plan for him and stor for him, and risk——"

Sarah Told to Hush

"Hush, hush—don't speak so loud! Where's your old discretion, Sally?"

"Let him look for descretion in Miss Baby, with her round face and her cold eyes. Does he think he can make use of her? Nonsense! It wants a human that's strong in her limbs to do the work he wants done, and not a soft little chit like that!

"Depend upon it, however useful she might be, he would never compare her services with yours, Sally. He is only amusing himself with his simpleton," the man said, soothingly.

But she interrupted him with a tone of half-suppressed savagery that made me shudder, out of sight though I was.

"Amusing himself, do you say? Only amusing himself! Looking at her, talking to her, not because he wants to make use of her, but because he likes her—loves her," she hissed, "as he has never loved any of his poorer tools though they were handsomer a thousand times than this wretched girl!

"If I thought that, if I really believed that, he'd find me more than a match for once. I'd spoil her beauty for her, and for him, if I hang for it."

"Sally, don't do anything foolish," said he. "Jim isn't a fool and he knows how to repay services like yours, though he may be a trifle harsh sometimes. Why, he might have thrown you over with the rest, when——"

I could hear no more; they had gone too far. I waited, until their voices had died away, and then dashed from my perch, through the plantation and the hall, up to my room as fast as I could, locked the door and sat down appalled.

What a terrible tragedy in the servant's hall we were likely to have if things went on like this! If Mrs. Rayner had been only a woman, not a statue, I would have confessed all to her; but, as she was, it would do no good. It was not the sort of thing I could tell Mr. Rayner, and there was no way of letting him know without telling him. There was nothing left for it but to hope that little Jane would be wise and leave off provoking Sarah, and that Providence would bring Sarah herself to a better mind.

But what a dreadful woman to have in the house! And why had the stranger spoken of Tom Parkes as "Jim"?

Awakes Oppressed

The next morning I woke up with that strange feeling of oppression which is caused by something unpleasant heard the night before. I soon remembered what it was and tried to shake off the recollection of the talk in the plantation and of Sarah's vindictive tones. I looked at her searchingly as she came in demurely to prayers with the cook and poor little Jane, and I could not help thinking that Tom Parkes, or "Jim," as the stranger had called him—but then a man of such a desperate character as they described him to be would have a dozen aliases—might be accused in preferring the simple little maid Jane to that forbidding-looking shrew.

That very day I had an opportunity of comparing my impression of Tom, when I thought him a harmless and inoffensive person, with my impression of him now that I knew him to be a rogue of the most determined kind.

When Haldee and I returned from our walk we came into the garden by a side gate at the back of the house and had to pass by the servants' entrance. Tom Parkes was sitting outside the door in as easy an attitude as the broken chair he sat on would permit, eating bread and cheese, while opposite to him stood Jane and Sarah, both apparently in high good humor.

One held a jug and the other a glass, and they seemed united in the desire to please by ministering to his wants and by a rough kind of humor to which he was not slow in replying. They were talking about kisses; and I think they were going to illustrate the subject when Tom suddenly became aware of our presence and, taking his arm from around Jane's waist, pulled his cap off apologetically and remained standing until we had gone by.

What a strange contradiction this seemed to give to what I had overheard on the night before! Sarah was scarcely the sort of woman to exercise great self control when affrony her equals. Yet here she was, all laughter and rough gaiety, submitting to the best temper to receive a share only, and evidently the smaller share, of Tom's attention with her rival, Jane.

I was rather ashamed of my strong interest in this low-class love affairs, but Sarah was such an exceptional woman and her admirer, from what I had heard, such an exceptional man that I could not help puzzling myself as to whether she had only been acting good humor or rather the love affairs of the ondemented were conducted on different principles from those of other people.

Discovers Rayner Has Book

That evening after tea when, my translation finished, the time came for Guizot, I remembered with a pang of conscience that I had left a nicely bound book out in the damp all night, forgotten in my hasty flight. I hurried through the plantation, eager to see whether it was much injured, but when I got within a few yards of my nest I saw Mr. Rayner there before me, standing with the unlucky volume in his hand.

If I had been conscience-stricken before, when my guilt was known only to myself, what did I feel now that I was discovered? I had not the courage to face him, but turned, and was sneaking back toward the house, when he called me.

"Miss Christie!"

I might have known I should not escape his sharp eyes.

"I am very sorry, Mr. Rayner," I began, in a low voice which almost threatened tears. "I brought that book out here to read, and I—I forgot to take it with me when I went in. I know it was most inexcusable carelessness—indeed I will never bring one of the library books out again."

"And why not, Miss Christie?" asked he, suddenly dispelling my anxiety by looking up with his usual kindly smile. "I am sure Guizot is dry enough to stand a little moisture, and if you were to throw him into the pond, you would be the only loser, for nobody takes him off his shelf but you."

"I don't read only dry things. This morning I found time to read nearly the whole of yesterday's paper."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

ANSWERED

A LANGUID swell was visiting a charming young society lady, and as they sat on either side of the fire his heart was full of a burning desire to say something to her only conjunctionary, but brilliantly flattering.

So, after revolving the matter in his mind, he said, "Ah, Miss Lillie, why are those fire-tongs so like me?"

He meant her to gasp, or else to tell her, "Because they glowed in her service," or were "prostrate at her feet," of something of that kind.

Miss Lillie, looking solemnly demure, said she didn't know, unless it was because they had two thin legs and a brass head. He was groping blindly for the front door before she had recovered from the shock of her own folly.

'THE SECRET OF SUZANNE' GIVEN PREMIERE HERE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Secret of Suzanne," Wolf Ferrari's one-act opera which has found its way into the repertory of all the great opera houses in less than three seasons, got its first Boston production last night.

It was one end of a double bill, Aubert's "Blue Forest" being the other, and Louis Aubert, the Parisian poet-composer was fluttering about the nobles quite unconscious that a mean trick was being played upon him.

For "The Secret of Suzanne" shows up "The Blue Forest." Aubert has surrounded a simple and charming fairy tale with an artificiality that is ridiculous, and has given to the poor children and the dainty fairies music that is a bad imitation of Debussy at his worst. While, on the other hand, Wolf Ferrari has taken a little scene in a drawing room, made it as natural as real life, and framed it in music that is positively enchanting.

After "The Blue Forest" had reached an unlamented finish, the orchestra struck into an overture that fascinated by its sweetness, daintiness and originality. Fetching little themes played hide and seek all over the big orchestra. The strings and woodwinds and brasses chattered like a bevy of charming girls at a picnic, and then the curtain rose upon an interior that was breathlessly lovely. It was the home of Count Gil.

The door opened and in came Scotti, arrayed in a sky blue coat of the mode of 1870. He sniffed and peered around, for he noticed an odor of tobacco smoke in his sanctuary.

The Countess Gil entered. It was Alice Nielsen, looking more charming than ever in her housskirts. The butler brought the tea things and then occurred a pretty little love duet as they drank their tea.

But the Count kissed his young wife and discovered an aroma of tobacco smoke upon her lips. "Ah, ha, some lover has kissed her," he thought, and immediately became quarrelsome.

And now the storm burst. You could hear it brewing in the orchestra, and the lovers snapped at each other in choppy recitative which came to a tremendous climax when the Count dashed about the room knocking over vases and breaking furniture.

The Countess fled from his wrath and he sank into a chair. Then into the orchestra crept an exquisite but mournful little melody, as he repented his sudden fury. When the Countess returned with pals hat, gloves and umbrella she repeated the melody and secured a hasty but forgiving kiss.

He has gone. The Countess cannot wait until she gets at her hidden store of cigarettes. The butler brings her a light. She sighs contentedly. Now she sings the big aria, a melody so airy and dainty and graceful as to have some relation to the thin vapor clouds she emits.

At the window appears the suspicious husband. He darts into the room, grapples with her and burns his finger on a cigarette. The surprise and joy of the Count to find how trivial is the secret, and the pleasure of the wife at being so easily forgiven form a reason for a pretty duet which ends the opera.

The coquettry, mischief and naturalness of Alice Nielsen in this role cannot be too much admired. And there are few opera singers who could treat this graceful music with the ease and eloquence displayed by her. I have heard her in better voice than last evening, but her performance deserves praise.

Scotti never had a part in which his courtliness, polish and elegance of manner, his powers of comedy and passion were better demonstrated. And vocally he could not be improved upon as Count Gil. Tascechia, in the small part of the butler, was efficient as ever.

Caplet conducted with an appreciation of the spirit of the piece that was evident. The performance was very excellent in all respects.

CITY BEAUTIFUL, SAYS GENEVIEVE CLARK IN BOSTON

Miss Genevieve Clark, the famous daughter of Speaker Champ Clark, has written for the AMERICAN her impressions of Boston on her first visit to this city. This first day was a busy one for her from the time she arrived with her parents at the Back Bay station until she departed for Washington early today after seeing the Evacuation Day parade and after being entertained by the committee of women representing the South Boston Citizens' Association.

Miss Clark writes graphically of her visit, of Boston, of what she saw and how she was impressed with the city. She loved Boston even with a critical eye and found it the City Beautiful, she says.' Her story of her first visit to Boston follows:

By MISS GENEVIEVE CLARK.

For a number of years I have wanted to see Boston. I heard so much about it. I never understood that the city was beautiful, but one of many crooked streets. When father told me that he was coming I told him that he must take me, so here I am.

We arrived at the Back Bay station shortly before 10 o'clock and were immediately driven to the Hotel Lenox. On the short run over from the station I saw for the first time the Public Library. I have read much about the Boston Library and I have seen reproductions of the painting, "The Holy Grail," Tennyson is my favorite poet and before I leave Boston I am going to see that painting.

After leaving the hotel on our way for the State House, I looked for the crooked streets. I did not find them. Instead I found a beautiful city, a city of beautiful buildings, parks and views. I was fascinated with the view as we rode up Tremont street. Looming up above the tops of the trees was the gilded dome of the State House.

Praises the State House.

The beauty that I had already seen was nothing compared to what I beheld when I entered the Capitol. It was the most beautiful picture I ever saw. The House of Representatives, the Executive Chamber, even the corridors were wonderful in color design.

From one of the windows of the Councillors' Chamber I could see over the vast acres of Boston. What a sight it was! I could hardly leave the window. I was next escorted into the Governor's private office, where I was presented with the pen that the Governor uses in affixing his signature to documents.

From the Executive Chamber I walked down a flight of marble stairs and for the first time looked into that little hall of fellow, held sacred by all who enter within its portals—The Hall of Flags. It was a most inspiring sight to see those standards which were carried through battle, now laid away in the final resting place, like the heroes who carried them, there to stay until their silken folds have withered away into dust.

Passing from the Hall of Flags, I visited several other rooms and finally reached the side entrance of the State House, where a machine was waiting to take the party to South Boston. Mr. Edward Barry pointed out the different places of interest along the way and when we reached Dorchester Heights I was told that the batteries of the Provincial troops were planted there to prevent the British ships from entering Boston Harbor.

From those heights I obtained a magnificent view of Boston Harbor, its lights and many islands. To the west and north I could see for miles until the sky and land met. It was just one panorama of splendor and beauty.

'MARTIAL LAW,' DEMANDS MRS. PANKHURST

LONDON, March 18.—"Militant suffragettes are not ordinary offenders; they are not even political offenders; they are prisoners of war."

With this ringing declaration, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants, today hurled defiance at the British government. Although Mrs. Pankhurst, who is under charges of inciting other women to commit arson, is at liberty on her pledge to abstain from conspiracy or inciting other women to crime until her trial comes up next month, her speeches and interviews are growing so defiant that the government may annul its agreement with her and put her in jail again.

"Let them put London under martial law," continued Mrs. Pankhurst. "We would not be treated any more brutally than we are now. Our leaders in prison are maltreated and we are not allowed the rights guaranteed to us by civil liberty outside the jails. But we have more than the government to fight now.

"Some of the weaklings have broken away from the Women's Social and Political Union and have formed an organization called the Constitutionalists. We must fight these misguided women, who are too timid to assert their rights in the proper way."

Premier Asquith is being counselled by his friends to take extreme precautions to guard himself in public as a result of the open threats of death made against him by women at the weekly meeting of the militants in the Pavilion Music Hall.

BROTHER HERMITS DEAD TOGETHER

BROWNSFIELD, Me., March 18.—John and Silas Paine, aged 62 and 65 years, brothers, who had been living a hermit life between this place and Conway, N. H., have been found dead in their house. An examination showed that both died from natural causes.

Japanese Passes Through Boston on Walk Round World

Yakido Tokuda, thirty-one years old, a graduate of the Japanese Naval College, who says he is walking around the world, went through Boston today. He left Portland, Me., two weeks ago, and has been on the road most of the time since, stopping only long enough to earn money for his meals and bed.

Tokuda says he will walk to Brooklyn, where he is to secure passage on a British sailing vessel for Liverpool. From Liverpool he will walk to London, cross the Channel by boat, and make his way to Japan on foot.

EIGHTEEN HURT AS LIMITED IS DITCHED

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., March 18.—Eighteen persons were injured, three probably fatally, when the Twin Cities Limited, northbound, of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad was derailed six miles north of here early today. Two cars were burned. The passengers were for the most part homeseekers bound for points in the Northwest.

MELLEN AND 10 DIRECTORS SEE CHAMBER HEADS

President Charles S. Mellen and ten directors of the New Haven today conferred with directors of the Chamber of Commerce. The significant topic which was under discussion was the manner in which the New Haven directors felt that the Chamber could best co-operate with them to better New England's transportation facilities.

The railroad directors were President Mellen and John L. Billard, Frederick F. Brewster, Alexander Cochrane, James S. Elton, James S. Hemmingway, Henry K. McHarg, Laurence Minot, A. H. Robertson, Robert W. Taft and Sidney W. Winslow.

Manager D. O. Ives of the chamber's transportation committee was not present, but Chairman George Hutchinson attended. Other topics suggested by the chamber's directors for discussion included the effect on New England of the establishment of a monopoly, control of coastwise shipping by the railroads and a larger representation for Massachusetts on the board of the New Haveen.

WELLS REFUSES TO BE HEAD OF HARVARD A. A.

Edgar H. Wells, general secretary of the Harvard Alumni Association, has announced that he will not accept the position of graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, which has been offered to him.

Mr. Wells was the most likely candidate for the position, and, it was generally supposed he would accept the position. His connection with the Athletic Association as a representative of the graduates, as acting dean of the college and in his present capacity made him especially eligible for the work left by the resignation of William F. Garcelon.

Mr. Garcelon will give up the reins at the end of the association's fiscal year, which is August 1. At present there is no one in line for the work, and no other name has been suggested to fill the vacancy caused by the unexpected resignation of Mr. Garcelon and the refusal of Mr. Wells.

Manager Stallings Is Determined to Develop Some "Inside" Baseball This Year.

By A. H. C. MITHELL.

ATHENS, Ga., March 18.—If it were possible to arrange a race at 100 yards between Jay Kirke, the Boston National outfielder, and an ice wagon, it is more than likely that the sporty element among Kirke's teammates would back the ice wagon, if anything like even money were offered. Jay is some fence buster when it comes to batting, but if he chances to rap an infield grounder, the fielder who handles the ball has time to lay down, roll over, play dead, beg, say "please," shake hands, stand on his hind legs and then toss Jay out at first.

Jay is crazy about baseball. He would rather play baseball than eat. To those who appreciate the fondness of the average ball player for the average dining room no more superlative comparison is necessary. But Jay realizes his weaknesses. He knows that he has nothing on gasteropoda in the matter of speed. He also knows that when he goes through the motions of what he calls running, he covers a course like that of a drunken sailor on Court street, Boston, Mass. The marks of his spikes on the base lines form a sort of spiral.

Jay knows all this full well and he realizes that his lack of speed seriously interferes with his advancement as a ball player. He conceived the idea that Jim Neary, the trainer, could help him acquire something in the Pegasus line, so he drew Neary aside and whispered a few words to him. "Sure," replied Neary, "come with me."

Act II of this comedy drama was performed in deep centre field, alongside the banks of the winding brook, the waters of which run much faster and much straighter than Kirke. After warning the player to be careful not to fall over the embankment, Neary put Jay on a mark, showed him how to "get set," explained the manner of using the hands, legs and shoulders and then yelled: "Go."

The shout attracted the attention of the spectators in the grandstand and they looked up to see the stupendous motions of Kirke and heard the far off rumble of his boots on the sod, as the player endeavored to follow the directions of the trainer. Neary kept Jay at it until the outfielder's tongue hung out and then announced that at the end of the week he would show an increase of three yards in thirty in Kirke's speed.

Sweeney to Join Kirke.

Captain Bill Sweeney, whose only baseball handicap is that he runs something like a mechanical tin soldier, was so impressed with the improvement shown by Kirke under the coaching of the trainer that he announced he would take a course of sprinting lessons today. Captain Bill is not the only member of the squad who needs coaching in the running department of the game. McKechnie, who runs leaning backward, might well improve his style. Seymour could stand a full course of lessons, but perhaps he is too old to learn. If Neary can teach the players to gain three yards in thirty, he would be worth double his salary.

Another important incident connected with the training of the Boston National League ball team here is a complete change of uniform by Hap Myers, the celebrated card player and first baseman of the Pacific Coast. When Hap arrived a few days ago all he carried in the way of baseball implements was a pair of pants and a Red Sox sweater he got from John I. Taylor's organization when he was a scrubbing it in two or three years ago.

So he borrowed an undershirt from Bert Whaling, said undershirt having seen service for several years on the back of a stoker in the Calcutta-Hong Kong trade. It was about the color of printer's ink smeared with iron rust. It was also as odorous as a dead mackerel and how it ever got by the morgue is the wonder of everybody within a mile of the ball park.

When in practice grew warm Hap would shed his sweater and practice in pants and undershirt, which he sometimes wore Garibaldi fashion. When Hap was at bat the catcher stood far behind the plate Hap was never hit by a pitched ball. The ball refused to come near enough.

Hap is built like a given streetcar. In sliding to third base in the last practice one of Hap's bones stuck out and in conjunction with the ground tore a large hole in Hap's pants. This was the cue for the other players to gather around him and threaten to go on strike unless he fitted himself out with fumigated baseball clothing.

Hap, who is nothing if not accommodating, yielded to the demand and today when he appeared for practice he wore an undershirt borrowed from Jackson, of Texas; uniformed shirt borrowed from Rose, of Buffalo; pants borrowed from Smith, of Cleveland; cap borrowed from Maranville of Springfield, and stockings borrowed from Strand, of Seattle. Hap furnished his own shoes, glove and "pep."

The last practice of the squad was nearly as odorous as Hap's old undershirt. The long absence from diamond practice threw the players off their stride. Fast work was impossible because the infielders fumbled the grounders, muffed the throw-balls and threw like blind men. It was an off day for nearly everybody and there were no smiles on Stallings' face when he returned to the hotel.

It has been decided to play the University of Georgia team tomorrow afternoon. Stallings' son, Vernon, who is a cartoonist on an Atlanta newspaper, is visiting his father and making sketches of the Boston players.

GALLANT GIVEN VERDICT IN GO AT GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, March 18.—About 1,000 "fans" witnessed the bouts at City Hall under the auspices of the Lenox A. C., the feature bout being between Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea and Joe Eagan of South Boston, the decision going to Gallant.

Eagan had the sympathy of the spectators, and Referee Hamilton's decision did not gain the approval of the majority, who thought a draw should be declared.

The bout throughout was clean, clever and scientific, although the tendency to hold in the clinches was too pronounced to suit the crowd, which howled for continuous action.

Eagan excelled with a left jab, but Gallant had the better of the infighting, being eager and willing all the time to set the pace, especially in the last three rounds and notably in the ninth.

Eagan's rounds were the fourth and sixth. In the latter he landed a left heavily on the jaw, which was his most telling blow of the bout. Both men finished strong and unmarked.

The first bout was between Sullivan and Regan, both of this city, and it ended in the first half of the second round, when a left to the jaw sent Sullivan down for the count.

ABEL KIVIAT TO LEAVE THE TRACK FOR THREE MONTHS

KIVIAT PLANS TO QUIT TRACK UNTIL SUMMER

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

Abel R. Kiviat, the world's greatest middle distance runner, retired from the indoor track at the close of his race in Buffalo last Saturday night, where he went down to defeat before Driscoll, the local champion of that city. The great Irish-American crack was not much disappointed because of his defeat, and he took it with a smile on his lips. It was the first time since the Olympic games that an athlete has dashed across the tape ahead of the greatest runner in the world.

Kiviat went to Buffalo to compete at the request of Fred Yokes, the well known sport promoter. The Staten Islander did not keep in training after his record string of victories, for he intended this race to be his last appearance indoors for the season. Before the start of the race one of the officials told Kiviat of Driscoll's request to be placed on scratch with him, but the Irish-American crack did not think too highly of his chances.

Driscoll Is Great Runner.

It is not taking any credit from Driscoll, however, who showed himself to be a great fighter and a game runner, for, although he was passed by Kiviat twice, he came back and in the final stretch started a sprint that caused an uproar from the 7,000 spectators assembled to witness the meet. Although Driscoll covered the three-quarters of a mile in 3m 7s., and clipped one and two-fifths seconds from the former record, when we hold up Kiviat, it is not saying too much to state that the national champion could have covered the distance in 3m 4s. This was the opinion of the critics and judges who watched the game.

This was Kiviat's last race indoors, and it might also be his last appearance as a track athlete, for the wonderful crack will undergo an operation tomorrow in one of the best hospitals in Gotham. Illness for some time been troubled with a kidney bone which has obstructed his motions, and has hindered him from breathing properly.

To Take Long Rest.

Kiviat will rest up for three months to prepare for the outdoor season, when he will attempt to lower the present world's mile record, held by Jones. Recording his plans for the outdoor campaign, the Staten Islander said: "It is my greatest ambition to lower the mile record. I would rather accomplish this than win all of my races for the next three years. I will try off at least three months."

ATWOOD, COACHED BY FATHER, WINS 10-MILE RACE

David Atwood of New Bedford, a nineteen-year-old boy, trained by his father, won the Municipal A. A. cross-country run at Dorchester yesterday afternoon in comparative ease, finishing 500 yards ahead of the second man, Roth, of the Dorchester A. A. The time announced for Atwood was 56m. 20s.

Jimmy Hemphan, running unattached and who will soon join the B. A. A., captured the time prize and also fourth place prize. His actual time was 49m. 41s., three minutes behind Atwood's starters.

WALSH CLAIMS LUCKY PUNCH BEAT MANDOT

By ED. W. SMITH.

Thomas "Hagerty" Walsh, manager of Joe Mandot, is out with the ever ready alibi for the idol of the New Orleans Frenchman. Manager who has stepped in the ropes round by Leach Cross last Monday night after having piled up a big lead for eight rounds. Mr. Walsh diagnoses the downfall of Mandot in expert managerial manner. He refers to the punch in the ninth round with which Cross started the rout of the Southerner as the "luckiest punch ever landed in the history of the prize ring." On three pages of baby blue stationery Mr Walsh alibis his fallen star as follows:

"Cross' victory over Mandot came in such a mysterious and unexpected manner as to leave the whole town stunned. Mandot, who was fighting like a champion, gave Cross the beating of his life for eight rounds. He knocked the New York dentist down in the fifth and made Leach miss every time he started a dangerous walloop. At the end of the eighth period the fight was so one-sided that ringside spectators were offering 3 to 1 on Mandot with no takers.

Mandot Uses Bad Judgment.

"Just before the ninth round Mandot, who was so confident of his superiority that he wanted to try for a knockout, asked me to turn him loose. But I told him he had the fight won and to go along and outbox Leach in the last two rounds. But instead of using his cleverness and following my instructions, he immediately went into a mixup in a corner of the ring. During that melee Cross landed what every man in the house, including Johnny Dundee, Frankie Burns, Promoter J. J. Gorman and others who know boxing from all angles, join in claiming was the luckiest punch landed in ring history.

"The wallop, a right-hander, caught Mandot right on the point of the jaw, and when Joe felt his head strike the floor so hard that it stunned him for five seconds. He used one hand to punch his own head in attempting to clear his brain. Then, when he got up, instead of trying to cover and stall, he jumped after Cross. But before he could ring he caught Leach a terrific right on the jaw which made his foe see red around the ring. When Cross went to his corner they had to use smelling salts to bring back his senses.

"But that punch was Mandot's big mistake, for it sapped most of his remaining strength. When he arose for the last round he tried to finish Cross with one punch. He missed and fell to the floor. Rather than see his man get up to take a useless beating, I tossed in the sponge.

Cross Declines Another Go.

"I am not taking any credit away from Cross, for to the winner belongs the spoils. But if ever there was a lucky win it was the one scored by Leach. Up to the time Providential Leach Cross was in danger of a knockout every minute.

"Terrific as Leach's punch was, it was after a fight, but Cross said he would not box Mandot again for some time. Leach opened the door that Mandot was a better man than Joe Rivers, saying he would rather meet the Medina every day in the week than Wheeler in the Amateur Boston Pin League, he is not to be denied. for he holds a season's average of 101. Wheeler said yesterday. "My score only goes to show the great possibilities there are in the bowling game.

COMMERCE HIGH BASEBALL TEAM AFTER HONORS

The baseball outlook for the High School of Commerce for the coming season is exceptionally good. Because of the intense interest shown by the athletes in the track team, the indoor practice has been somewhat delayed. A large number of candidates, however, are out for places on the team.

The school is exceptionally well fitted for the coming season by the return of O'Leary, who has been chosen to captain the team and Rockwell, who together with O'Leary should compose an excellent battery. With Lavery, Sheehan, King and Lelpsto to call on, the outfield should be strong, as these lads showed up remarkably well last season.

Promising candidates for the pitching staff are McCarder, Corwin, Mitchell and Stevenson, while McDonald, Center, Garin, Burrans and others are making a good try for the infield berths.

A schedule, which includes games with the best high school and "prep" school teams in the State has been arranged and the Gray and Blue boys will be obliged to play ball from the start to the finish if they intend to hold their baseball honors.

Under the instructions of Coach "Skip" Sherlock the men should show marked improvement.

Manager Sullivan has arranged the following schedule.

April 8, Alumni at Fenway; April 9, Pending; unlisted; April 12, Powder Point at Duxbury; April 16, Somerville at Somerville; April 19, St. Mary's at Lynn; April 23, Milford at Milford; April 26, Medford at Medford; April 30, Malden at Malden; May 3, B. U. High at Lowell; May 7, Bridge at Cambridge; May 10, Milton at Milton; May 14, Brookline at Brookline; May 18, M. A. H. S., unlisted; May 22, English, undecided; May 24, St. John's Prep. at Danvers; May 27, South Boston at South Boston; May 30, Concord at Concord; May 31, Everett at Everett; June 4, Arlington at Boston; June 7, Haverhill at Haverhill; June 11, open; June 14, Newburyport at Newburyport.

RED SOX PITCHERS IN MID-SEASON FORM

World's Champions Beaten by Pirates in First Game of Season

By L. R. MURDOCH

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 18.—Bedient, Leonard and Foster have had their tryouts in a big league game and all of them have delivered the goods. Bedient had the Pittsburgh Pirates swinging wild for three innings on his first appearance of the season. They went out in order in every session.

Harrigan had four putouts. The Pirates underestimated the speed that this young champion put on the ball thus early in the season. They were fooling them off all the time.

Leonard tried three innings, too, and showed considerable speed. He did not try his curve ball seriously. The youngster has a long, swinging delivery and he had the Pirates batting with his arm instead of with the ball. They struck wide of the ball with great frequency and the Sox scores does not tell the record of strikes swung at and called.

Under the circumstances it looked like the best judgment to coach Gibson along, even at the risk of passing him, and playing for Robinson. But with two balls called Foster laid one in the grove, and Gibson singled, scoring Butler with what proved to be the winning run of the first game of the series.

Sox Pitchers Did Well.

All of Stahl's three pitchers looked better than "Babe" Adams, who was worked five innings by Fred Clarke. In the very first inning Steve Yerkes hit the ball a mighty drive, and it landed close to the centrefield fence, which is about as far from the home plate as the flag pole from the coaching station at Fenway Park. Under the ground rules the hit was limited to three bases, but an accident happened that nearly cost it short of that, besides crippling the champion's second backer.

Approaching second base one of Yerkes' spikes was caught in the hard ground and he turned a complete somersault. He was sorely injured. Yerkes scored a little later on Speaker's single over Byrne's head. In the fourth Lewis, Gardner and Carrigan singled for another run. In the sixth, with Robinson pitching, Lewis scored the third and last run for the champions on a fluke play. He went up a high fly to a gravel mound in right centre, and Artie Hofman fell just as he was about to gather it in, the play going for a two-base hit.

Lewis went to third when Wagner made a phenomenal stop of Gardner's drive back of second, and Javerin came across with a timely long fly to Hofman, on which Lewis tallied. Lewis completed a good day of batting by singling again in the eighth, making three hits in all. No other Sox made more than one in the game, the first of the season.

"Honus" Wagner distinguished himself by some marvelous fielding, the superior of which is not seen in the league season. Gibson also made a remarkable one-handed catch of Leonard's foul, close to the Pittsburgh bench, in the seventh.

Red Sox Yannigans Win.

While the Regulars were dropping a game to the Pirates, the Red Sox Yannigans upheld the honor of Boston by trimming the Pirates' second team at Majestic Park, at the other end of the town, by a 7 to 6 score. Brandt, Martins, and Moseley did the pitching for this team.

President McAleer of the Sox watched the Yannigans play, and will continue to keep his eyes on them, instead of the regulars. He will begin weeding out the youngsters before long, and he wants to have a good line on them before disposing of any of the recruits. "Heinie" Wagner handled the Yannigans, assisted by Joe Wood. "Heinie" is almost down to weight now, and will soon be ready to play.

The next game will be played Wednesday.

Majestic Park, the Sox training grounds is a much better ball field, as the outfield at Whittington Park is lined with a dangerous gravel. But the Whittington Park stands hold a bigger crowd and the rival magnates count on paying part of their training expenses from the gate receipts.

The first game drew 5,000 fans, betwitnessing a counter attraction in Harry Lauder's appearance here that filled the local theatre. The crowd was a lively good one game, exactly the equal of most of the good contests in the league season. Boston rooters predominated in the crowd.

Harry Lewis Puts K. O. on English Ring Champion

LONDON, March 18.—Harry Lewis, the American welterweight, knocked out Jack Harrison, the middleweight champion of England, in the third round of a twenty-round contest here. The fight took place at the National Sporting Club.

Harry Lewis last February obtained an award of $3,750 damages in a suit against a motor cab company on account of injuries he had sustained in a taxicab accident, which, his counsel argued, had impaired his nerve, vitality and his ability to fight. Perhaps Harry's nerve has been affected, but if such is the case he failed to show it here, as Harrison will bear testimony.

KELLEHER IS FIRST IN SCRATCH RACE

FALL RIVER, March 18.—Jack Kelleher of Cambridge defeated Harvey Cobb, of New York, formerly of the Irish-American A. C., in a 600-yard special scratch race at the skating rink here, winning at the tape only after a very hard race, in 1m. 17 2-5s. The track was 100 yards long and the race was six laps.

MAYO IS DEFEATED BY YOUNG SMITH

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 18.—At the McGregorville A. C. Young Smith of Brockton, Mass., knocked out Young Mayo of Manchester in the fourth round of an eight-round bout. In the semi-final Young Gardner was defeated by Nap Roy, and in the preliminaries Young Greenwood knocked out Young Sheehan in the second round.

TECHNICALITY STOPS NEW BEDFORD BOUTS

NEW BEDFORD, March 18.—The Chick-Duchesne bout was called off. In a thoughtless moment the Portuguese Montana A. C. asserted in its daily papers "admission fees" instead of "assessments," and Mayor Ashley notified the chief of police not to permit the exhibition.

EASY FOR BRITTON.

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—It was not necessary for Jack Britton to try as hard as he did to win from Johnny Krause at the Olympia. He won by a mile, at that, but could not knock out Krause, who was loudly applauded for making a game fight against all kinds of odds.

WINTHROP MAN MAKES A FINE BOWLING MARK

Herman H. Wheeler of the Winthrop Yacht Club, who holds the present individual single string record of the Amateur Boston Pin League, rolled the excellent score of 130 against the Bostons at the old Winthrop Yacht Club recently. This score is all the more remarkable when one considers that it was made in competition, for at the time Wheeler was rolling for a five string total to qualify in a tourney which is being conducted at the Winthrop alleys.

The score, box by box, is as follows: 20, 30, 30, 30, 24, 25, 8, 10, 9, 10—180. Wheeler began his wonderful string with a spare and followed it up with five successive strikes. After this remarkable run the strain was too much, as it usually is when scores run so high, and in the last four boxes the Winthrop roller failed to chalk up a mark. In the last two boxes he had two single pin leaves, but missed them both.

Wheeler's bowling was witnessed by Edgar Whitney of the B. A. A. team, who was competing at the same time. Whitney said that it was the best piece of work that he had ever seen on a bowling alley.

While there are much better bowlers than Wheeler in the Amateur Boston Pin League, he is not to be denied, for he holds a season's average of 101. Wheeler said yesterday. "My score only goes to show the great possibilities there are in the bowling game.

Fred Daly Selected to Coach Williams Eleven This Year

WILLIAMSTOWN, March 18.—Fred Daly, coach of the Williams football team, will again have charge of the Purple gridiron warriors next Fall, according to an announcement made here by the football authorities. Daly was captain of the 1910 Yale eleven and has been head coach at Williamstown during the 1911 and 1912 seasons.

He has been peculiarly popular among the Williams undergraduates and his success as a coach has been almost unlimited. Manager Ely of the 1913 team received a telegram from Daly on Saturday, but letters giving the details of the arrangements have not yet been received.

EFFORT MADE TO BAR BOXING ON COAST

SACRAMENTO, March 18.—Efforts were made today by exponents of the fistic game to secure the Assembly number for the purpose of converting it into an arena, Wednesday night, and staging boxing bouts there. The legislators, many of whom have never seen a bout, will be invited for the purpose of convincing them that the boxing game is not brutal. Considerable opposition against the game has cropped out among certa n factions in the Legislature, and the boxing promoters want to demonstrate that the game is clean, and so forestall any adverse legislation.

SETS SKATING MARK.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, March 18.—O. Mathiesen, the Norwegian champion, established a new skating record for the 500 metres at Hariar. He covered the distance in forty-one seconds. The previous world's record is forty-one and one-fifth seconds, made by Mathiesen at Christiania, February 17, 1912.

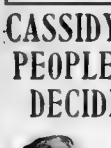
CASSIDY SAYS: LET THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE DECIDE BAD EGG ISSUE



Mr. Cassidy today reports yesterday's hearing on the anti-rotten egg bill introduced by Representative John F. McCarthy.

The sensation of the hearing came when Professor William T Sedgwick of the Institute of Technology testified that rotten eggs "never harmed anyone" when eaten as food.

Other testimony was presented all wing that over 2,000 pounds of rotten eggs are sold daily in Boston

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

William T. Sedgwick, professor of biology and public health at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, declared at the hearing on the bill introduced by Representative John F McCarthy to stop the sale of rotten eggs in food that rotten eggs never harmed anyone who ate them—that they were a right tasty dish for food.

Many other users of the filthy traffic in rotten eggs, including the wholesale grocers, were present at the hearing, but Professor Sedgwick was the only witness who appeared to speak for them.

PROFESSOR SEDGWICK.
ALTON B. BRIGGS, Executive Secretary of the Fruit and Produce Exchange.
HENRY W. MANSFIELD, representing the Retail Grocers.
FREDERIC HUTCHINSON, representing the packing companies.

Hutchinson Withdraws.

Mr. Hutchinson withdrew his objections after the proponents of the bill agreed to limit it to eggs sold for food purposes, and to allow the sale of eggs for tanning purposes.

Professor Sedgwick was the chief one ever again to testify. After his statement in defense of rotten eggs he admitted, upon being questioned, that he had represented in court cases the firm of H. J. Keith, located in this city, and dealers in frozen, powdered and canned eggs.

This firm is now facing charges in the federal courts for alleged sale of rotten eggs; it was also a constituent to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, giving an amount approximated to $5,000. The testimony of Professor Sedgwick's testimony was the most remarkable presented at the hearing.

"The egg question is not a public health question.

"It is true the public believes that if they eat rotten eggs, they will be made sick, as a matter of fact, while eating rotten eggs may nauseate a man there is no evidence that a rotten egg contains any poisonous matter.

"If a man can get a rotten egg down his throat and get he made sick by the taste and smell, it probably won't hurt him a bit. If he can keep it down and digest it he will be all right.

"THE QUESTION OF THE SALE OF ROTTEN EGGS IS NOT A HEALTH QUESTION, THEREFORE; SO FAR AS HEALTH GOES, ROTTEN EGGS ARE NOT UNFIT FOR FOOD."

Senator McCarthy asked

"Have you ever testified in court on this point"

Mr Sedgwick answered that he had.

Senator McCarthy asked "Whom did you represent."

Professor Sedgwick answered

I have named the H. J. Keith Company. I am speaking from I do not represent them in this hearing."

Alton E. Briggs made one of his characteristic speeches denying that he objected any pure food law and in the next breath arguing against the passage of this bill because he said it was not necessary

Henry W. Mansfield also represented the retailers and declared he wished to oppose the bill

As was expected, the hearing developed some sensational testimony. Joseph T Auerbach led the fight for the bill in an able speech he summarized the conditions of the rotten egg industry. He said

It is an indictment of our civilization that such a bill as this is necessary. It is an indictment of any man that opposes it.

Arguments were to fight these bills.

The Board of Health says this rotten egg industry does exist and has existed for years. Of late, leading States have passed laws to stop the industry, but Boston and New York are the dumping ground for the rotten eggs of the country

Used in Boston Bakeries.

"Rotten eggs are used for food purposes in Boston bakeries. I have analyzed them eggs through a bakery—had them tested by Dr. Rosenberger of Philadelphia and found them rotten. They killed guinea pigs into which they were injected.

The Fruit and Produce Exchange, through its agent, Mr. Briggs, opposes this law. It is easy to see why. The sources of the supply of rotten eggs are the commission houses and packing plants. The eggs are marked "Not Edible" when sold by them—but they are sold at a price that makes it evident to anyone that they are for use as food.

The District Attorney has told me he is satisfied rotten eggs are being used in Boston for food. He says he is satisfied he can convict those selling rotten eggs. I myself can present witnesses who have taken rotten eggs for the rotten egg dealers and have later delivered these same eggs to bakeries. I have personally followed every stage in the process from the work of breaking the eggs to their actual delivery to the bakeries.

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan told of a case within his knowledge where the "Not Edible" label was torn off eggs in stores after the inspecting visit of the eggs were sold for food. Inability to on record as favoring the bill

Miss Abbie F. Sherburne declared the Homekeepers' League of over two hundred women, favored this bill

Mrs. D. Malahan told how some of her friends objected to the rotten egg men who would drop by her at my office

I am a prominent of the bill and they heard it

It is the same here in the case for and against this bill.

It is a tremendous traffic in rotten eggs in Boston

This measure would block that traffic.

This measure would give your authorities power to properly punish the traffickers

AGAINST THE BILL—

Alton E. Briggs says it isn't necessary

W T Sedgwick says a rotten egg won't hurt you

With absolute confidence in the Committee on Public Health, and in the Legislature and in the common sense of the people, I leave the issue here. Let the people decide whether they want this bill and clean, wholesome eggs or the rotten bill and rotten eggs.

And remember, Professor Sedgwick says a rotten egg won't hurt you if you can swallow them

Brookline Violinist Praises Hospitality of West

Miss Bessie Bell Collier, the Brookline violinist, who recently returned from St. Paul, Minn., where she appeared as soloist with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra.

"THE people of the West are extremely delightful and very hospitable," declared Miss Bessie Bell Collier, the well known violinist, who is recently returned to Brookline with her mother from St Paul, Minn., where she appeared as soloist with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra

"During my stay at that city and in Chicago," she said, "I was the guest at many luncheons and found the people of the Northwest extraordinarily pleasant Some of my acquaintances there explained the hospitality by saying, 'You know we are Bostonians, and thus have carried the Boston style Westward and are spreading it constwise.'

"From a musical standpoint, that field is probably not quite as old as it is in the East. Their orchestra is about seven years old, but they are doing splendidly. They are very appreciative. Possibly they do not have the opportunities that we have in hearing the novelties. Take all in all, the people possessed true Western spirit."

Miss Collier is well known in musical circles, having appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on a number of occasions as well as with the New York Symphony, New Haven and St. Paul Symphony Orchestras.

When Values Increase

THE women have a great deal to say about the broadening effects of travel

Which means boiled down to meet the limitations of actual experience, that every time a woman goes to another town to broaden her mind she comes back gowning with tales of the wonderful bargains she found there in a ten-cent store

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a firm advocate of this method of broadening the mind, and is never so happy as when, at the depot ready to start on her father's money, she gets a cinder in her eye and experiences all the broadening effects of visiting a new ten-cent store

She returned from such a broadening trip with a "gold" pin she bought at the marvelous ten-cent store in the town she visited. She had paid only ten cents for it

The pin was a tremendous success. It began Daysey Mayme; an' her father left the room in disgust

"Moral," he wrote in his diary that night after reading the incident—then he scratched his head and hastily added

"There is none. Since I've milked the first cow and grumbled because she had to do a man's work, women have cried over spilled milk, contending that it was cryin'.

Then he closed his diary with the solemnity of one who has discovered a great truth.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

FEB. 26.—I once heard of a man who was called upon to make a speech. He rose to his feet and began in a hesitating way by saying that he was at a loss to know what to talk about.

"Talk about a minute!" called a voice from the audience.

So, Diary, before I relate what has happened in the past two days I intend to talk about a minute of why I do not marry the widow.

In the first place, for Manette's interests will always be first with me, Mrs. Brown is not a good mother. I tremble to think what kind of a stepmother she would make, for, in a way, that would be her relationship to Manette.

I very often see Richards sewing on a button, or repairing rents in garments that do not belong to Manette, and when I questioned her one day I found that little Alice Brown's clothes are in such a state that she, Richards, would be ashamed to have Manette seen with her unless they were first repaired.

His Many Reasons

"That Alice Brown is a nice child," grumbled Richards one day, "considering that her mother thinks only of herself."

Another reason: I have learned, without seeking the information, that Mrs. Brown has had two husbands. She was divorced from the first, and the second is dead. When I marry, Diary, I want my wedding to be a strictly amateur performance.

A third reason: Mrs. Brown's interest in me lies solely in my bank account. My wealth and the lack of an incentive to hard work are degenerating enough. Heaven knows I don't want to reach the depths by becoming to the woman I make my wife no more than a dollar sign.

All good reasons and true, but will they save me? Since I told her that Mrs. Spencer is to choose my wife for me, adding like the silly fool that I am, that "she is coming down to look at you," the widow nets toward me as if the wedding cake had been ordered. You may know what desperate straits I am in, Diary, when I tell you that for three long hours today I listened to a soliloquy by Sarah Rae's "Aunt Marie." It was a soliloquy because she talked of the many surgical operations she had undergone in her life so well that she doesn't tell it. She recites it. "Aunt Marie" recited it. It became a soliloquy because no reply was expected of me.

I simply raised my eyebrows in horror till I thought I could raise them no more, and she went on, adding more organs that had been cut out. I felt safe under "Aunt Marie's" wing, and never once glanced toward a pleasant little corner of the porch where there were two chairs, one occupied by the widow of the late Mr. Brown.

"Aunt Marie" informed that she considered Manette the best behaved child at the beach, which warmed my heart toward her.

"I have never seen," looking toward a sand pile not far away, where Manette and Alice Brown played, while Tompkins sat on the sand nearby, reading his paper and acting guard, "a better mannered child, nor a more beautiful one. Nor have I ever seen a child give to any man the adoration that child gives you."

The Tie Between Them

I turned to where Manette was building her little house of sand, and, instinctively, she knew that I was looking for her. I have brought her to me side many times by a look and an unexpressed wish. She looked up, jumped to her feet, demolishing her house of sand in her eagerness, and ran to me, jumping into my arms and squeezing me almost to the choking point with her fat little arms.

"I love you, I love you most of anybody," she repeated over and over again, kissing me after every word, and ending the outburst of affection with a happy little sigh, as she settled down in my lap.

I looked at "Aunt Marie" over the little golden head against my breast, and I think there was a mist in her eyes as well as in mine.

"I hope," she remarked, opening her novel as if to dismiss the subject, "that you realize what it would mean to a sensitive child like that to let the alleged love of a wife come between you."

I think I realize it fully, but I did not tell her so. I am told so often that the child needs a mother. Does she, in order? She is so well kept physically, so perfectly attired, and I have the word of all who see her for the assertion that she is a good little girl. Would conditions be improved for her if I presented her with a woman to fill that relation? And the risk is so great!

There are years that are coming when her need of a mother will be greater than now, and even her beloved "Aunt Marie" will not always be with her. How I wish, Diary, that my little girl were nearly years and older, and I could put her future and her fortune beyond defiling and grasping hands by marrying her myself.

Her Isolation.

February 28—When we return north, which will be soon, Sarah Rae Hartman is going with us as Manette's guest. The child wants her, having taken quite a fancy to my curly-headed guardian angel, and Sarah Rae wants to go. Sarah Rae's isolation from that which other girls of her age enjoy, a home, and love and sympathy of an understanding friend or relative, strangely appeal to me. It is another form of the isolation I myself endure.

March 1.—I told the widow today that we would soon be returning north.

She showed her disappointment so plainly that I was glad that I had mentioned my plans in the presence of my protector. Sarah Rae Hartman, who was swinging in a near-by hammock with Manette and a stack of dolls.

She asked my plans for the Summer, so told her I hadn't made them. She said she wished I had, so that she could arrange to be with me there, adding, "The Sumner has been so profitable here with you, Max," in tones that gave me a taste of wedding cake frosting in my mouth.

I repeated that my plans all depended upon certain business deals, and would be determined purely by circumstances over which I had no control.

It was all a falsehood, of course. I know what I will do all Summer. I will am a member of the Rabbit Club, composed of old bachelor rabbits, who will run for the right of remaining bachelors. Thereafter I will lope for cover at sight of Mrs. Brown as a rabbit lopes when a pack of hungry hounds approach.

Greek Dances Gave Greek Maidens Their Grace and Beauty

Story by Margaret Hubbard Ayer. Sketch by Michelson

The maidens dancing the Emmeleia on the green lawns were graceful and unconscious of anything but the joy of the dance that celebrated the coming Spring.

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

THE fair maids of Greece did not have basketball or tennis, but they had similar games and played them with expert grace.

The emmeleia was a sort of scarf dance executed by the young girls alone and danced with long veils to the music of their own songs or the flute of one of their number.

These scarfs were waved in just the same manner as we see the dancers manipulate them today, but the Greek girl was physically perfect and she was trained in athletics and in the grace of movement.

She had the advantage over the modern girl who tries to imitate these dances because she had never worn a corset or high-heeled shoes.

As well formed people, who do not wear shoes, walk better than the most graceful woman who does, because few people have on the green lawns were graceful because shoes that fit them, in the first place, and a shoe that is the least bit tight or too loose throws the body out of poise, placing the weight somewhere else than on the ball of the foot.

The Greek girl has no tight clothing, and little of what she did have, though she was not dressed as chilly as she looks. Their garments were generally of a warm wool material, and they soon became expert dyers, buying beautiful colors from the Phoenicians. She you can imagine them dressed in glowing shades of all kinds.

There were no stiff forms of etquette in these days, and that made a great deal of difference. Girls are so often awkward because they are not sure of the dancing master rules of deportment, that came long afterward as part of court etiquette, and which drifted down to all peoples, and made them afraid to be natural because they might be set down as ignorant.

The maidens who danced the emmeleia they were unconscious of anything but the joy of the dance that celebrated the coming Spring.

Of all the descriptions in Homer's Odyssey there is none more beautiful than that of Nausicaa and her maidens playing ball on the shore and finding the shipwrecked hero among the bushes. You remember that the lovely Nausicaa was the daughter of the King and went down to the water's edge early one morning to wash the festival raiment with her maids. They accomplished their task and then bathed themselves, rubbed themselves with oil and ate their luncheon. Then they started to play ball on the sand where they had left the linen to bleach. One of the girls threw the ball far into the bushes and when she went to get it, Nausicaa, the King's daughter, discovered the other King, Ulysses, who had been tossed about for days on the ocean and was finally washed ashore by the god Neptune to be saved by Nausicaa and her dancing maids.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE DOES NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man and he professes to love me, but trust me he will not, no matter how I assure him I am true. He says one could not trust any girl—that they are all deceitful. Does this young man really love me

PERPLEXED.

IF he loved you he would trust you with anything, anywhere, anyhow. In the depth of his devotion he would trust you, though his head might warn against it.

THEY ARE WRONG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I became engaged to a young man the second week in July, and we love each with the deepest and cleanest and most holy love that is in existence between a man and a woman, and nothing except death can separate us. This young man is in business for himself, and needs every cent he makes. Now, on account of this, it is impossible for him to buy me a ring, and on account of this my parents do not believe that he will keep his word, and do not trust him. They promised to make a party in honor of my engagement, but they refuse to do so, as my parents state that it will be a shame for them to introduce their child to our friends and family as being a bride when I have no sign of being one—that is, I have no ring. Now, I argue with them, that at the time he has no ring to give because of the condition of his business, and that the sign I have of being engaged is in my heart—my great and holy love for him—and likewise his for me, but they do not listen to me, and they nag and nag, until I feel that I will break down.

LOVE BLESSED.

THE ring is only a symbol. Girls have been wooed and won, and been happy wives till death without either an engagement or wedding ring.

Retain your faith in him, and, since a party without the ring would embarrass your parents, refuse to have the party.

That, also, is unnecessary to real happiness.

Self-Control Makes You Master of Destiny

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Thought Magnets

Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.

WITH each strong thought, with every earnest longing
For aught thou deemest needful to thy soul,
Invisible forces are set thronging
Between thee and that goal.

'Tis only when some sudden weakness alters
And changes thy desire, or makes it less,
That this mysterious army ever falters
Or stops short of success.

Thought is a magnet, and the longed-for pleasure,
Or boon, or alm, or object is the steel
And its attainment hangs but on the measure
Of what thy soul can feel.

"IDEAS often come to you that uplift you greatly for a time. The way to make them permanent is to take hold of them by forming them into words and repeating the words until your sub-conscious self receives them and begins to build with them.

"For instance, a friend who had very set opinions about right and wrong, allowed herself to get very much wrought up when things about her went on in a way that to her seemed wrong. She tried to practice self-control, but never gained the victory as she desired until one day when the thought came to her that it was far more important to demonstrate self-control than it was to have everything go on about her as she thought it should.

"She did not want the idea to get away from her, so she wrote it down like this: 'It is not so important that things go as I think they should as it is that I should be master of them through self-control.' Then she repeated this again and again and held it in the Silence until the words became substance in her and gave her mind a firm hold so that in the next temptation to give way to her feelings, she easily gained the victory. You can apply this in any kind of experience you may have."

UNITY.

If you are working among people whose manners and habits jar upon you, apply this rule and watch developments.

Once you CONTROL YOURSELF you will be surprised to find how many things which annoy you will change or disappear.

Just so long as you are a servant to your own irritable nerves and whims, you will find the world is one succession of sharp corners against which you bruise yourself at every move. When you become master of yourself the corners will round into curves imperceptibly, but surely.

Your Attitude

The same rule applies in your home.

What attitude are you taking toward your own family and relatives and friends and toward humanity?

Are you posing as a martyr? Do you wear the resigned expression of a wronged creature who must submit to persecution, or a sullen, resentful one, or a belligerent one?

Are you thinking and brooding over your wrongs and making yourself and others miserable in consequence?

If you are doing any one of these things you are a criminal—far worse than many a convict behind prison bars. If you are disturbing the peace of your household, the comfort of husband, or children, or relatives, or friends by your temper, your complaints, or your sarcasm, then you are a murderess. It is a more unpardonable crime than many committed by people who are condemned by Judge and jury, no matter how high your standing in church or community.

Perhaps you are a wronged, misused wife, and tell me your troubles have destroyed your nervous system and that you cannot help being irritable and cross and saying unpleasant things at times.

I tell you in reply that the most adorable, agreeable and angelic woman I ever knew was a wronged wife, a woman who had suffered every indignity and humiliation and neglect possible from a mean, brutal-natured man. Yet she made a heaven for her children and friends in her home.

She had learned this great law of becoming Master of Circumstances through self-control.

Although things about her were not to her liking, she made all these things seem as trifles before her calm self-conquest. She said to herself, "Though my best love and my best faith and my sweetest hopes have been thrown into the dust, I will not let myself go down.

"I have lost respect for the man to whom I gave my life's happiness; but I will not lose my respect for myself; and I will show the world I can create happiness, even if I cannot find it where I hoped it would be, in my married life."

Surely this was better than becoming soured, aggressive, complaining and pessimistic, and making her presence dreaded by all her associates.

There was a great French writer who said, "If you have not what you like, like what you have."

But even if you cannot like your environment, you can make yourself a MASTER of it; and refuse absolutely to be dominated by it.

You can grow and rise above it; and after a time, if you do this, the environment will change; and circumstances will alter to your will.

The whole philosophy of life is contained in that little sentence from "Unity."

"IT IS NOT SO IMPORTANT THAT THINGS GO AS I THINK THEY SHOULD AS IT IS THAT I SHOULD BE MASTER OF THEM BY SELF CONTROL."

Happy, sturdy, little boy! He didn't need "three guesses" to know it's

Safe Hints

To whiten a doorstep mix a little quicklime with half a pint of skim milk. Having first washed the doorstep, paint it over with this mixture, and the rain will not wash it off.

• • •

Instead of lining the drawers in the bedroom with newspaper, give them a coat of good white paint. This is much cleaner than paper, and when cleaning is necessary all that is required is to wipe them out with a damp cloth.

• • •

When choosing beef press it with the thumb, and if it rises quickly it is of good quality.

• • •

The best way to keep eggs fresh is to cover them with fresh lard or with water was dissolved in warm olive oil—one part of the wax to two of oil is the proper proportion.

• • •

Teacups, no matter how carefully or may be washed or dusted, sometimes get dark stains at the bottom. These are caused by the action of the tannin in the tea. Salt, slightly moistened, will remove these stains, but in the case of very fine china it is wiser to use powdered whiting instead of salt, as it will not scratch the china.

• • •

It is not generally known that eucalyptus oil will remove grease, including cacbi si oil, from any fabric, no matter how delicate, without injury of any kind. Dressmakers should welcome this tip, as oil is often spilled on a costume in the making, due to bad-working machines.

Cruel to Birds

A foreign-looking gentleman was walking in the Johannesburg Zoo not so very long ago and read the notice: "Birds-nesting is strictly forbidden."

"How cruel you are in Africa!" he said to his friend. "Why, even the birds are not allowed to make their nests in your public Zoo and gardens."

Swift & Company's sales of Fresh Beef in Boston for the week ending Saturday, March 15th, averaged 11.91 cents per pound.

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

All our testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are the expression of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

Stock Prices; Financial News

Although dulness prevailed, stock markets had a stronger tone today and locally both Mellen issues sold higher. In the first hour Boston & Maine went up 2 points and New York, New Haven & Hartford gained ½. By that time the latter had recovered part of its loss in the New York market. In Boston, Fitchburg preferred sold ¾ higher at the start.

United Fruit continued weak, going down a point. It closed two points lower yesterday. Boston Elevated advanced a little in early trading.

There was not much movement in coppers, and price changes in that group did not signify much.

The New York market grew stronger during the first hour. At the end of that period Union Pacific, Amalgamated, American Can, Southern Pacific and Reading were all fractionally higher.

How dull business was is shown by the fact that in New York during the first hour transactions totalled only 58,500 shares. Operations were about all by floor traders.

New Haven Weaker in New York.

New York, New Haven & Hartford was weaker in New York at the opening of the big market, dropping 1⅛ to 113⅜ at the beginning of trading. The issue closed ¼ of a point higher in New York than in Boston yesterday. The weakness of New Haven again had a depressing influence upon the list. It being one of the oldest and usually steadiest of stocks.

New York prices were irregular at the start, with Canadian Pacific a strong feature. In London there had been a tentative covering on this issue because of its good earnings report. The firmness it obtained abroad sent it up a point in New York.

In spite of the good showing of the first annual report of California Petroleum, this issue declined ½. Southern Pacific advanced ⅛, and fractional gains were made by American Can preferred, Inter-Met. preferred and Northern Pacific.

Among the declines were Amalgamated, ¼; Woolworth, ⅝; Steel common, ¼; United States Rubber common, ⅝; New York Central, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅛; Goodrich, ⅝; American Beet Sugar, ⅛, and American Can common ⅛.

The railroad list, especially the New Haven road, was affected by testimony before the arbitration board supporting the demand of New Haven trainmen for higher wages.

The Curb was dull.

Americans in London improved, then rejected.

Government Cotton Report.

The Federal Census Bureau at Washington has issued a report which shows that cotton consumed during February was 466,933 running bales, cotton in manufacturing establishments on February 28 was 1,557,348 bales and in independent warehouses 2,252,011 bales. Imports were 34,040, equivalent to 500 round bales, and exports 330,911 were running bales. The number of cotton spindles active during the month was 50,518,318.

President to Rule on Tariff.

It is said in Washington that the House Ways and Means Committee is willing to submit to President Wilson the tariff bill which it has framed before it is presented to the Democratic caucus, or if it is said, "the President objects to features of the bill the committee members themselves will thresh them out with him, and if necessary will change the bill to meet his views if he refuses to yield.

"It is the intention of the committee to offer to the House a bill which the President will approve when it is sent to him for his signature."

London Copper Market Dull.

The standard warrants market in London was dull at the opening. Spot copper was unchanged, but futures were down 5s.

Sales of electrolytic are understood to be meagre at present.

In the month was heavy enough to fill immediate requirements of consumers. The prices most recently asked by sellers range from 15¼ down to 14⅝. The former is the figure of the big concerns and the latter that of the little ones.

For February the output of the Calumet & Arizona smelter amounted to 4,032,000 pounds of blister copper, compared with 6,780,000 in January.

Sulzer Bills to Third Reading.

Progress has been made in Albany towards enactment of the bills which Governor Sulzer wants made law for regulation of transactions in stocks. Eight measures have been advanced to a third reading in the Assembly, among them a bill for incorporating the New York Stock Exchange. Others are as follows: Prohibiting the New York Stock Exchange from preventing its members doing business with the Consolidated Exchange; making it a felony to publish fictitious transactions in securities; prohibiting brokers from trading against customers' orders; penalizing brokers for doing business after insolvency; making it a felony to publish false statements regarding the securities or condition of a financial corporation; making it a felony to manipulate the prices of securities, and the Anti-Bucket Shop bill.

The bill calling for a statement of the day, hour and minute of each transaction was amended. It now requires that the statement show between what hours the transaction was made.

Another bill, still in committee, was amended by giving corporations thirty instead of five days in which to file statements of their financial conditions following the first day of each quarter.

Financial News in Brief.

The New Haven road has just spent $2,000,000 for equipment, the new rolling stock including twenty-three multiple unit motors, twenty-two multiple unit trailers, twelve electric locomotives, eighty-five steam road engines, twenty-five steam switching engines, eleven steel dining cars, two steel kitchen cars, fifty steel coaches, steel postal cars and fifty steel baggage cars.

The January gross earnings of Pere Marquette increased $257,900 and for seven months the gain was $411,116. Net for January net increased $270,504 and for seven months only $270,504. Operating expense and taxes increased $298,285 in seven months.

E. W. Bliss & Co. have declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on preferred stock.

The Bank of Germany weekly report shows an increase of 25,377,000 marks in gold on hand. Cash in the vaults now $8,701,000 and deposits 99,108,000 marks.

Concession in pig iron prices are being freely made, and several blast furnaces have been shut down due to scarcity of orders. Certain steel companies are expected to give the market support through purchases from merchant furnaces.

American Light and Traction stockholders have voted to increase the common stock from $15,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Tobacco Products Corporation has declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock.

The New York sub-treasury gained $3,645,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $7,141,000 since Friday.

FORBES WARNS CREDIT IS NEAR BREAKING POINT

By B. C. FORBES.

We are a great commercial nation—very great.

Don't forget that inspiring fact during the next six months. There will be need for remembering it. The brokers that months ago we were warning people to prepare for are rolling towards the abyss. That there will be a good deal of wreckage cannot, unfortunately, be doubted. Those deep in debt should strive to extricate themselves without delay. Credit has been strained until now it is creaking ominously.

Wall Street's pessimism has not been without basis. Latterly it has been overdone. By the time manufacturers, importers, merchants and the like are wallowing in despondency Wall Street will be regaining its courage.

We are a great commercial nation. That has just been emphasized. Glance at these figures: In eight months we have exported merchandise valued at almost one and three-quarter billions, a record never before approached. Our imports total a billion and a quarter, also a new high-water mark, two hundred millions above the previous maximum—in 1912.

Our balance of exports over imports in eight months has aggregated $475,000,000. Make a note of that fact—and recall it to mind when the breakers hit the shore.

Foreign Trade Hits Record.

February's total foreign trade was the heaviest for the second month of any year in our history. Exports were $195,000,000 and imports $150,000,000. That is equal to a million dollars an hour for twelve hours on every day of the month.

Nothing depressing in that? Each day we sold $1,500,000 more than we bought.

That's not a raggot for the slumbering fires of industrial pessimism, is it?

I would fain stop and not write another word. It is not pleasant to have to record facts of another sort. But the picture must be fairly drawn and truthfully colored. "Forewarned is forearmed." If we are prepared for commercial detonations they will frighten us less. That we must look for a series of repeaters—I don't like to use the term "explosions"—cannot be denied.

Prior expansion of credit lies at the root of the trouble. Wall Street has been liquidating. Now trade must face a similar ordeal. Wall Street has done its share with a wonderful, an amazing freedom from casualties. Let us hope that the industrial and mercantile worlds will bear themselves with equal fortitude and with a like absence of casualties.

Money Reserve Low.

The country's national banks last month reported upwards of $300,000,000 more loans than a year ago, but no increase in cash to justify this enormous expansion—instead a loss of fully $17,000,000. The ratio of reserves to deposits is the lowest for this season in a decade—worse even than 1907. The New York Clearing House banks' reserve have fallen to the lowest point since the panic. The most influential institutions are refusing to lock up their funds in time loans. Country banks have been the principal lenders in recent weeks. A total of $45,000,000 gold has left the country during the last two months—$2,000,000 goes today, despite the fact that call money costs twice as much as it did a year ago, and time money almost twice as much.

Abroad monetary conditions are worse. The Bank of England, the axis of the whole financial world, is weaker than it has been at this time of the year in more than twenty years. Its discount rate has not been so high early in March for a decade.

Small Investors Hoarding.

The Bank of France has virtually stopped paying out gold, and is offering a premium to attract supplies from America. It has taken $18,000,000 since the opening of January. The Imperial Bank of Germany has been in even greater straits. It is bidding panic rates for loans here, and is drawing gold from both London and New York.

The big Prussian government loan was a failure—the first incident of the kind ever experienced. Austria is in a bad way. Italy, Turkey, the Balkan States, China, Japan and other countries are also run down financially, and must have money, no matter what the cost. And small investors are hoarding every penny they can lay their hands on.

To make matters worse, the mad bankruptcy race for costlier armaments has developed breakneck speed. Then, remember also, that the bill for the terrible destruction of recent and current wars remains to be paid.

The monetary tension should relax somewhat after the very heavy April 1 settlements have been arranged. There should be no collapse in Berlin or elsewhere at that time. But staggering amounts of new obligations are soon to deluge the money markets so that interest rates cannot go very low.

All signs prompt a bearish attitude on trade. Sound bonds can be bought on attractive terms, and the best stocks should soon attract attention. Some of them are not dear now—far from it—but they may go lower before the grand recovery starts up in earnest.

MOVE TO DRIVE MORMON ELDERS FROM BOSTON

Mormon elders must be expelled from Boston or change their tactics.

This is the attitude of the Anti-Mormon Association of Boston. A mass meeting of protest will be held in the Park Street Church Monday, April 7, at 3 p. m., to expose the methods of the Mormon elders in this city.

The principal address will be made by the Rev. William N. Faden, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Salt Lake City. Dr. Faden has been specially invited from that city to address this meeting and describe the methods of Mormonism in the United States with special reference to the work going on in Boston.

AN AID TO PHYSICIANS WHO TREAT CONSUMPTION

New Swiss Preparation Very Valuable Treatment.

If there is anything in this world that will help relieve from consumption it is worthy of everyone's attention, including physicians. Therefore, when Sinolin, the swiss lung preparation, was introduced in Europe several years ago and its remarkable results were noted, it naturally created a great sensation. The result is that now Sinolin is brought to America with the remarkable number of indorsements from European specialists and a long string of stories about its success.

No extravagant claims are made for Sinolin, but its past work is offered as proof of its worthiness of the regard of sufferers.

Information about Sinolin can be secured in any country from the Sinolin Co., 220 West Broadway, New York, and Bowers-Jeffers Drug Store and all leading druggists are distributing Sinolin with considerable success.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston—and over 250,000 more than the next highest evening newspaper—and over 150,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation booked open to all.

—Sir Charles Cameron, M.D.

THUS writes the noted Analyst of the City of Dublin. Why does a man of such standing make so definite a statement? Because, Physician and Chemist that he is, he knows that Sanatogen is able to feed the nerve centers, able to convey upbuilding nutriment to the exhausted cells, and to make other food feed and nourish the debilitated system. Nowadays the term "nerve food" is woefully abused—but here is a product which has every right to be called a food for the nerves. The scientist in the laboratory knows from experiment and the physician at the bedside knows from experience that Sanatogen acts as a true food-tonic, that its concentrated constituents, purest albumen and organic phosphorus, are eagerly absorbed by the hungry cells, acting as true reconstructors of blood and tissue, as upbuilders of nervous vitality. Over 16,000 physicians have written of the remarkable benefits Sanatogen has conferred upon their patients in times of nervous stress and general debility. Professor C. A. Ewald, M.D., an acknowledged authority, echoes the experience of his brother physicians when he states in a recent contribution that he is able to speak from his own observations in a large number of cases, especially in neurasthenia, and that he has obtained excellent results.

If you are in need of an upbuilding tonic, there is offered to you in Sanatogen an article of genuine merit, tried in the crucible of experience, a true food tonic which daily performs in practice that which it promises in theory.

If you wish to learn more about Sanatogen before you use it, write for a free copy of this booklet, beautifully illustrated and comprising facts and information of the greatest interest.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere, in three sizes, from $1.00.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The work of dismantling what remains of the Pleasure Vehicle Show and preparing for the Motor Truck Show, which will be inaugurated in Mechanics Building tomorrow evening, progressed favorably today. At noon, the trucks, both light and ponderous, were being hauled into the building and placed in the position where they will remain for a week to come.

This truck exhibition will be one of the most impressive that has ever been held in New England and, one might say, in the country. The manufacturers of America will put forward their very best work in trucks and wagons for any and every conceivable purpose.

The light delivery wagon, such as is used by the local merchant, will here be shown alongside the ponderous five-ton truck of the transportation companies. Each has its particular purpose and each its particular work to perform and all will have some interest for some business man or other.

In the display will be some of the best-known of fire-fighting apparatus. The majority of the builders are now making a specialty of fire-fighting apparatus and wagons for municipal uses. There will be several ambulances shown and it will be noticed that in this line, as in all others, particular care has been paid by the builder to the requirements of the particular work that the vehicle is scheduled to perform.

In speaking of the truck exhibition Manager Chester I. Campbell said:

"I believe this will be the most complete and thorough exhibition of motor vehicles for commercial purposes that has ever been staged in this country, and from what I have already learned it will attract the heads of the big departments in the big manufacturing establishments of New England.

"The business houses in this section are all interested in motor vehicles for transportation purposes and not for another twelve months will their experts have an opportunity of inspecting such an array of vehicles as will be on the floor at the opening of the show tomorrow evening."

The number of fire apparatus that will be shown will be surprising. In speaking of this phase of the industry, Manager Fred Lucas of the Pope-Hartford Company said:

"The great value of motor fire wagons and their advantages over horse-drawn apparatus is now so generally recognized that to supplement this statement with exhaustive argument seems wholly unnecessary. The experimental use of the Combination Chemical and Hose Wagon for practical fire fighting has long since passed, while the chief and his assistants who are not equipped with motor cars are sadly handicapped. Single trial fire wagons have been followed by others and hundreds of progressive municipalities have planned or are planning the complete motorization of their fire departments.

"Pope-Hartford fire wagons are specially designed and built completely in our own works for the hardest and heaviest kind of service demanded of this type of vehicle. They embody the experience of thirty-five years gained in the manufacture of highest grade mechanical vehicles and possess in the highest degree the strength, durability and all-round efficiency so necessary for practical and reliable departmental work."

"A Clean Tooth Never Decays"

A Sensible Line from a Useful Advertisement—Remember It

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

The advertisers of this country have done, in the way of preaching that is worth while, more good than is generally realized.

Manufacturers of soap for the body, the kitchen, the plate and the linen have done a great deal to encourage and to promote clean living.

Manufacturers and packers of food, properly prepared, have educated the people as to the danger of germs and harmful drugs.

Very great good has been done by those that manufacture tooth brushes, tooth powders, mouth washes and other means of keeping the teeth, the mouth and the throat in sanitary condition.

The line at the top of this article, "A clean tooth never decays," is part of the advertisement of a concern that manufactures a good tooth brush.

We recommend this line to our readers, and especially to the mothers and fathers of children.

There is no greater curse than the loss of teeth, in middle life, and the curse is all the more annoying, BECAUSE IT IS UNNECESSARY.

There is no reason why any man, barring unusual and exceptional disease, should lose his teeth at ANY time. Proper care of the teeth of children and proper care of teeth when the child is grown, will enable the intelligent man to take all of his teeth into the grave with him—and to heaven afterward, if the teeth go with us when we rise again.

It is important for mothers and fathers to remember, in caring for their children, that "a clean tooth never decays."

And it is important to remember also that teeth not clean MUST DECAY. The child from the very beginning, from its babyhood, should be taught the habit of cleanliness from head to feet, and especially the habit of keeping the teeth clean.

The little baby should have its mouth and its toothless gums carefully washed, with an absolutely clean piece of soft rag or absorbent cotton dipped in warm water, after feeding time.

When the first tooth appears it should be brushed just as carefully as though it were the complete tooth outfit of some large shark.

The milk teeth so called should have exactly the same care as the teeth of the young girl starting out for her first party.

Good care of the first teeth is the best possible thing to insure a good and healthy crop of SECOND TEETH.

Careful brushing of the teeth at least twice a day, with the right kind of a tooth powder or a good tooth wash, should be impressed so strongly upon the child as a daily habit as to prevent the giving up of that habit at any future time.

The teeth that are not clean MUST decay.

Substance left between the teeth, upon the surface of the teeth and of the roots, develops acid, promotes decay, ESPECIALLY AT NIGHT DURING SLEEP WHEN THE GLANDS OF THE MOUTH ARE INACTIVE.

See that your children's teeth are kept clean. It is tiresome and difficult at first, especially if the habit has not been fixed in very early youth.

BUT KEEP AT IT.

Explain to your children how painful the toothache is, how unnecessary the suffering is, and how slight in comparison is the nuisance of brushing the teeth regularly.

See that the tooth brush is not old and worn. Get a tooth brush of first class quality. Give the child a good supply of good tooth powder, or tooth wash, or both. Interest the child by explaining how the right kind of a disinfectant kills the germs that are dangerous.

AND DON'T NEGLECT YOUR OWN TEETH.

If you have been in the habit of neglecting them, thinking that it is too late, get out of the habit.

Go and see a good dentist. Have your teeth thoroughly cleaned and put in order. THEN KEEP THEM IN ORDER.

No man now has the excuse of ignorance—for luckily the energy of advertisers reminds us every day how many pores we have in our skin, how much poison we ought to wash out of them, how important our teeth are to digestion and health, and all the rest of it.

Don't be like old Cervantes, the great Spaniard, who wrote "Don Quixote." When he described his own face—of which, by the way, the only authentic portrait is supposed to have been discovered recently—the main feature of his discription was: "Two teeth in bad condition, unfortunately not placed properly so as to be opposite each other."

Poor Cervante's misfortune was the basis of a very old joke. But those that share his misfortune know that the joke is a very poor one to the owner of the mouth with two teeth only.

"A clean tooth never decays."

Write that out and hang it up in the bathroom. Make your children read it, and read it yourself.

Curious Air-Breathing Fish, Able to Live on Land or in Water, Brought Alive from Africa

Strange Specimen Carries Us Back to the Time When Life Was Just Emerging from the Waters of the Globe—Lung Fish Lives in Water in Winter, in Mud in Summer

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

A CURIOUS air-breathing fish, a specimen of which was recently sent alive from Africa to this country suggests some wonderful thoughts about the developments of the inhabitants of this earth.

The animal referred to is called the "lung fish." It is a rare survival of a race of creatures which was quite common on our planet millions of years ago, although now it is as much out of date as a Pleistocene savage would be in the midst of a modern city.

Able to live either in the water or the atmosphere the lung fish represents a class of animals which is believed to have formed a kind of biological stepping-stone by which life advanced from the sea to the land. It is really almost as great a curiosity as would be a living pithecanthropos — that mysterious creature of ancient Java, which some naturalists think may have marked the passage from ape to man.

The lung fish lives in shallow water and when the water dries up in the Summer time it burrows into the mud, leaving a little hole through which air can enter, and there it remains, dormant, breathing the air through its chimney, until the Autumn floods come and release it. The specimen sent to this country arrived in just that condition, encased in a block of dried mud.

The earliest animals of the earth lived in the water. They could not survive on the land. Probably there was almost no dry land in their day. They were boneless creatures. Gradually a change came over some of these boneless creatures. They acquired bony skeletons, and the beginning of vertebrae, or backbones. Then they evolved into fishes, whose remains are only found in rocks not longing to a later age than that in which the sole inhabitants of the earth were boneless. Still the land, such as there was, apparently had no inhabitants.

At length these first backboned animals developed more perfect skeletons, and, in a yet later age a new type was formed, the amphibians, which were vertebrae animals capable of living part of the time on the land. They seem to have made their appearance in the great carboniferous age, when the coal plants abounded. It is of this class of animals that the lung fish is a belated survival.

Once out on the land, the living forms appear to have made rapid progress, and soon came the wonderful age of the great reptiles, when the masters of the world's life were monstrous creatures which engaged in a fierce struggle for existence. Near the end of the reptilian age an ambition seems to have seized some of the earth's inhabitants to conquer the air, the consequence being that out of certain forms of reptiles the first birds were developed.

The vertebral, or backbone, type had now reached its full development, but something yet higher was in store. After millions of years more of progress the mammals were developed.

Now, for the first time in its history the world had MOTHERS.

The mammal is an animal which brings forth its young alive and nourishes them from its own breast. So the mother-instinct was born, and from the first animals possessed this instinct the principle of evolution slowly brought forth the highest type of all, in man.

The lung fish's ancestry carries it directly back to the time when life emerged from the water into the air. It is by no means the only amphibian animal known. The frog is an amphibian also, but it represents a family which has advanced in accord with its surroundings, while still retaining its great primal characteristics of being able to survive in two elements—air and water. The lung fish appears to have kept, through all the intervening ages, close to its original type, and so it possesses a special interest. It comes to us clothed with the mystery of time. It bears us back at a glance through tens of thousands of centuries. Its modern relationships are among the salamanders.

It is wonderful to glance back over this history of life development. First shapeless, mollusk-like creatures, without a bony skeleton, living only in water; then fishes, with elemental skeletons and backbones, but still inhabitants only of the water; next more highly organized fishes, with true backbones; afterwards amphibians able to choose between water and land; then reptiles and other land-living and air-breathing creatures; next birds, flying in the air; and, finally, mammals, whose rising type eventuates in man.

And now man, as if envying the birds their aerial empire, has begun to seize upon that also. In the general progress of life there has been no backward step.

Has this evolution reached its uttermost limit? If not, can any one guess what the next step may be?

Money Makes a Great Big Noise in the World.

Give the Impression You Have Money and You Will Make Money; for This Is the Standard by Which the World Judges.

By THE REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE.

MONEY is the god of our time and the comedy "Ready Money" now being played at the Shubert is its prophet.

You feel and again in ordinary life, but it is a rare treat to have it served up in such good style as this comedy makes evident.

For this reason every one should see "Ready Money." It gives the truth of the matter and you can't help but nod your assent to many of the details of the power of money that are here disclosed.

When Stephen Baird, owner of Sky Rocket mine in this comedy, says that "Money made an awful noise all night," isn't it so. You have felt this. Often you have talked it over with others, you, yourself, have fallen before this noise. You think that you'll be so happy, if you get more of that money to produce that noise.

You see people getting closer to you and showing you marked attention when you can show them a good roll of bills.

It has always been so; it will always be so. Whether it is the weakness of poor human nature or not does not matter. Every one has this respect for the noise of money.

If you sit down at the table of a millionaire, and enjoy the luxuries that wealth affords, you can't resist this feeling, that money sways, and money talks, and money makes money, and money will gain friends, and money will clear up many of your difficulties, and money will reel off many pleasures to you and you will be fawned upon and looked up to.

With Noise of Money You Will Never Lack Friends

Yes! Money makes money. Ah, there's the noise. Once give the impression that you have the money and then you have the right kind of noise. You can hide other infirmities under this mask.

You can be dull, ugly looking, but poke that roll of bills before the world and let the world see that you are not poor. Your prestige is then established.

Keep yourself well tuned up with this idea of gaining the world by the noise of money and you will never be without friends.

Stephen Baird could fumble over and over his last quarter without making any noise.

Nobody cared anything about Sky Rocket mine till they saw the bills, though they were counterfeit bills, that "Steve" finally had passed over to him from Jackson Ives, a character.

No one knew, outside these two men, they were counterfeit bills. They did the trick. Just those bills brought to him investors. The sight of money begets money. People will do everything to get more of it. They will forget everything. They will forget that you once were poor, but if you can give them evidence that you have money, then they are with you.

Put up a big front with money and you will make money. You may not be worth a cent, but give the impression that you have. That is all. Work that impression through a variety of ways. You will catch the people, because when they see you are successful with money they will spring at you with money that they, too, may get some of what you are supposedly making.

Now, I am not saying that this is right. I am only indicating what the world judges by. This comedy makes all this so delightfully clear. You knew all this beforehand. You have it served up to you in fiction. But get the humorous touch of it from this comedy. There is not a dull moment in any part of it.

It is your feelings all over again. You see yourself in those actions and in the talk. Everything is so real and so true to life.

Women Are Sensitive to this Big Noise Money Makes

It is just what you want to see, because it is just what you should laugh over. It is not going to cure you of the noise of money, but it is going to make you see some of the folly in clinging so closely to this mammon of the world.

There is an old saying in Selden's Table Talk, not often read these days, but it gives a flavor to "Ready Money." It is this:

"Money makes man laugh."

If old Selden came back to life again and saw this play he would shout with joy and say, "That's what I meant in my essay on money."

Now it is hard to deal humorously with money and make it play such funny antics on the stage. It is here well done. To see the women in the play coming forward with their money to invest in the mine, after they have had their confidence restored in it, does not argue that women love money more than men. It only goes to show that they are sensitive of the noise, too.

But for real downright insight into woman's proneness to feel the inspiration of money, there is nothing that shows this to better effect than this comedy.

If you want to laugh over your love of money, go and see "Ready Money." it cannot fail to make you enjoy money, even though you do not possess it to any great extent.

Recrimination

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.)

I.

SAID Life to Death, "Methinks if I were you
I would not carry such an awesome face
To terrify the helpless human race.
And if, indeed, those wondrous tales be true
Of happiness beyond, and if I knew
About the boasted blessings of that place.
I would not hide so miserly all trace
Of my vast knowledge, Death, if I were you.
But like a glorious angel I would lean
Above the pathway of each sorrowing soul,
Hope in my eyes, and comfort in my breath.
And strong conviction in my radiant mien,
The while I whispered of that beauteous goal,
This would I do, if I were you, O Death!"

II.

SAID Death to Life. "If I were you, my friend,
I would not lure confiding souls each day
With fair false smiles, to enter on a way
So filled with pain and trouble to the end.
I would not tempt those whom I should defend,
Nor stand unmoved and see them go astray.
Nor would I force unwilling souls to stay
Who longed for freedom, were I you, my friend.
But like a tender mother I would take
The weary world upon my sheltering breast
And wipe away its tears, and soothe its strife.
I would fulfill my promises, and make
My children bless me as they sank to rest
Where now they curse—if I were you, O Life!"

III.

LIFE made no answer; and Death spoke again;
"I would not woo from God's sweet nothingness
A soul to being, if I could not bless
And crown it with all joy. If unto men
My face seems awesome, tell me, Life, why then
Do they pursue me, mad for my caress,
Believing in my silence lies redress
For your loud falsehoods?" (So Death spoke again.)

"Oh, it is well for you I am not fair,
Wolf that I hide behind a voiceless tomb
The mighty secrets of that other place.
Else would you stand in impotent despair
While unfledged souls straight from the mother's womb
Rushed to my arms, and spat upon your face."
